Loan on Corn With RFC Aid Is Announced By Roosevelt

President Asks Jones to Put Up $85,000,000 for Farm Aid.

Rate Will Be Set At 45 to 50 Cents

Congress to Be Urged to Make Commodity Loan Plan Permanent.

The Farm Outlook.

President Roosevelt, in a telegram to Chairman Jesse Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, directed setting-up of machinery for extension of commodity loans on corn.

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics predicted the business letdown will extend into 1938 in its annual estimate of markets for farm products. Page 2.

The House Agriculture Committee agreed on a tentative general farm bill embodying compulsory control quotas for tobacco but not for cotton, corn or wheat, Chairman Marvin Jones announced. Page 7.

Corn Loan Decreed.

By Robert C. Albright.

Fiscal machinery for financing the Government's proposed corn loan, without further permanent increase in the unbalanced current budget, was announced yesterday by President Roosevelt in a telegram to Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The President asked Jones to supply the Commodity Credit Corporation with $85,000,000 of RFC funds on a temporary basis, until enactment of legislation clothing the CCC with authority to raise funds through sale of its own obligations.

The plan apparently involves further unbalancing of the budget, by $85,000,000, for a limited period, until the Commodity Credit Corporation raises money to pay back the RFC commitment.

Plan Is Permanent.

Details of the corn loan remained to be worked out under "regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture with my approval." It is expected to range between 45 and 50 cents a bushel. Farm organizations have asked 60 cents a bushel. A top loan of 9 cents a pound recently was authorized for cotton, and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace said 46 cents a bushel would be a "comparable" loan for corn.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Acting Budget Director Daniel Bell, recently directed by the President to study means of financing the corn loan within the budget, conferred with the President at Hyde Park yesterday. But the telegram to Jones was dated Sunday.

In his wire to the R. F. C. chairman, the President said "there has been under consideration, as you know, Commodity Credit Corporation loans, including corn loans, aggregating approximately $85,000,000.

"I have decided," he said, "to recommend to Congress as soon as it meets, legislation which will provide the Commodity Credit Corporation with ample capital and with authority to raise the funds neces-

British Envoy, Debarking at New York, Says He Must See Wife Regarding Entertainment; Ernest Simpson Arrives on Business.

By the United Press.

New York, Nov. 1.—Almost every big liner that made port today brought someone connected with the story-book romance of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, who, it was learned, are to be luncheon guests of President Roosevelt.

Down the gangplank of the Queen Mary strode a tall, broad-shouldered Englishman sporting a guards' mustache—Ernest Simpson, whom Wallis Warfield divorced so she could become the Duchess of Windsor.

Down the same gangplank walked Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador to the United States, saying that he would have to consult his wife before deciding whether to give a formal dinner party for the duke and duchess in Washington.

Delayed by storms, Mr. and Mrs.

C. I. O. Tempers Stand on Eve of Algic Hearing

By Edward T. Folliard.

On the eve of a hearing for 14 sailors of the S. S. Algic on a charge brought under the mutiny laws, the National Maritime Union, seagoing arm of the C. I. O., yesterday took a more conciliatory attitude toward Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy, of the United States Maritime Commission.

Joseph Curran, general organizer of the National Maritime Union, wrote to Kennedy to say that newspaper reporters were in error when they quoted him as making these two statements:

"We are going to get Kennedy's scalp."

"We will have to get rid of that guy."

Curran closed his letter by expressing hope that the commission and union "can find a solution to the Algic case." What he meant by this was not made clear.

The 14 members of the Algic's crew, who were arrested ten days ago on a Federal warrant charging them with depriving a captain of his authority and command in a foreign port, will be arraigned this morning before United States Commis-

Vocational Aid Held Up by U.S., States Charge

Failure of the Federal Government to disburse any of the $14,483,000 appropriated by Congress for vocational education aids yesterday brought sharp complaints from the States that their programs are being retarded and the Government is not "keeping faith."

Authorized in the George-Deen act of June, 1936, the money actually was made available last August in the Interior Department appropriation bill. The President signed the measure but protested the enlarged outlay for vocational education.

Complaints from the States yesterday were piling up in the Federal Office of Education, charged with administering the fund, and it was said an official explanation of the tie-up may be made in the next two days.

The office of the Commissioner of Education is said to have worked out the amounts to be paid to the various States and certified the allocations.

One official said the subsidies were being held up pending "determination of the State's preparedness to use them."

It was pointed out here that the President warned Congress that

Kent Accuses U. S. Interests Of Puerto Rico Political Plot

Legalistic skullduggery by United States interests to prevent Puerto Rican liberty was charged yesterday by Rockwell Kent, whose post-office murals have been labeled propaganda for rebellious islanders.

Kent told the Women's National Press Club the jury which convicted Pedro Albizu Campos, president of the Puerto Rican Nationalist Party, and seven associates last summer on charges of conspiring to overthrow United States rule in the island was hand-picked for its friendliness to American sugar and banking interests. Except for names of the firms he mentioned, the artist made it clear his charges were definitely on the record.

The artist claimed that on a visit to Puerto Rico during the trial, he had heard the prosecuting attorney, in conference with two other men, discuss a list of possible jurors and identify several of them as being friendly to certain American sugar and banking firms.

Mayor Pledged 500,000 Majority on Eve of New York Vote.

Detroit Labor Fight Bitter to End; Cleric Seeks to Govern N. J.

But even the last blaze of fury in the New York campaign failed to overshadow the Nation-wide interest in the effort of John L. Lewis' C. I. O. to obtain control of Detroit's municipal government.

Briefly, the status of outstanding campaigns was as follows:

New York—Special Rackets Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey, running mate of Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, announced he would have at least 500 voters arrested today, and that he would challenge more than 4,000 others. This was the LaGuardia faction's parting shot at its Tammany foe as the mayor, promised by his campaign managers he would be re-elected by "more than 500,000 votes" tapered o... with only three speeches in election eve.

Last-Minute Speeches.

Detroit—A record vote of 450,000 was expected as Patrick H. O'Brien, C. I. O.-indorsed nominee for mayor, and Richard W. Reading, supported by the A. F. of L., carried their oratorical efforts up to the last minute last night.

New Jersey — A Presbyterian clergyman, the Rev. Lester H. Clee, unbeaten in three elections since a reform movement thrust him into politics, ended his Republican campaign for Governor with an appeal to New Jersey's 2,000,000 voters to "smash" the long-powerful machine of Frank Hague, Democratic State leader.

Boston—A campaign in which oratory shared the spotlight with a police investigation into padded voting lists closed as six mayoralty candidates mapped plans to get out a big vote in today's non-partisan election.

Harrisburg—Threatening to quit if Republicans won, Philadelphia's mayor put the final bit of color into Pennsylvania's municipal elections, which had a hot fight over a graded income tax as the only general issue.

New Haven—Biennial election campaigns closed in Connecticut's three largest cities, where once dominant Republicans sought to regain power.

LaGuardia Leads, 2-1, In Dr. Gallup's Poll

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Nov. 1.—Fiorello H. LaGuardia, Fusion candidate for Mayor of New York, led by nearly two to one over Jeremiah T. Mahoney in the final balloting of an American Institute of Public Opinion poll completed here today.

LaGuardia had 64 per cent of the total, Mahoney, 36 per cent.

A special institute survey in connection with the Detroit News indicates a decisive victory for Richard W. Reading in Detroit's mayoralty election tomorrow. The poll gave Reading 65 per cent to 35 per cent for Patrick H. O'Brien, candidate indorsed by the C. I. O.

Motorists to Get Record Auto Tax Bills Tomorrow

The traffic department tomorrow will begin mailing 1938 tag applications together with prescribed fees which show the most drastic tax increase ever imposed on automobiles.

Taxes on all types of vehicles will be doubled in all cases and in some instances tripled under the new weight scale of taxation passed in the last session of Congress, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer said.

With the new system of taxing vehicles by weight also will be imposed the usual personal property tax which has been increased 25 cents for each $100 valuation.

The minimum tax rate for any automobile in 1938 will be $6 as compared with a $2 minimum last year.

The weight tax will take the place of the usual $1 tag fee.

U. S., Britain Still in Accord On Parley, Eden Text Shows; Japan Averts American Clash

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Tuesday), Nov. 2.—Japanese military authorities, under increasing pressure to guard against international incidents as their armies fought fiercely to dislodge the Chinese west of the International Settlement, sidestepped a clash of authority with the United States Marines today by promising to return a Chinese junk and its cargo of rice seized in an "invasion" of the American defense zone.

Marine headquarters announced that the "rice incident" will be considered satisfactorily closed if the Japanese return the junk and its cargo at 2 p. m., as promised.

Rear Admiral Denkiti Okoti, commander of a Japanese landing party, called on Maj. Gen. John C. Beaumont, Marine commandant, this morning and expressed his personal apologies for the incident.

"Flying Forts" in Action.

American authorities had protested the seizure immediately after it occurred yesterday, and for several hours there was no indication the Japanese intended to return the rice. Beaumont insisted the seizure constituted an invasion of the American defense sector.

The Japanese today sent their "flying fortresses," huge bombers reportedly armed with small cannon in addition to machine guns, into the air for the first time during the Shanghai war. Along with other war planes, these mystery bombers subjected the Chinese west and south of the International Settlement to one of the most devastating aerial attacks of the war.

[A Chinese spokesman declared China's army had driven Japanese forces back from the south bank of Soochow Creek, despite a relentless Japanese artillery and aerial bombardment attempting encirclement of Shanghai, the Associated Press reported.]

Confidence Asserted.

[The spokesman asserted the Japanese were repulsed in Shanghai's western suburb by Chinese armed only with trench mortars, machine guns and rifles, in the face of Japanese artillery.

["We are fully confident now of holding the enemy, who is facing us in large numbers at Rubicon road," said the spokesman.—Editor's note.]

In North China a Japanese spokesman said Japanese armies invading Shansi Province were closing in on the provincial capital, Taiyuan-

Eden's Allusions to U. S. Role In Nine-Power Conference

Special Dispatch to The Post.
Copyright, 1937, by The Washington Post.

London, Nov. 1.—Following are pertinent excerpts from the best record obtainable on what British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the house of commons respecting the Nine-Power conference:

"Mr. Noel Baker's other complaint concerned league action not on our initiative, but I think it wise action to refer this Far Eastern dispute to the signatories of the Nine-Power Treaty. The honorable member absolutely refuses to appreciate the difference between the position which the United States occupies at Geneva and the position which she will occupy at Brussels. Surely the difference is vital.

EDEN.

"At Geneva the United States representative was only there as an observer taking no part in the proceedings, having no responsibility for the decisions. We all know quite well that any action, whatever its character, that can be taken in this Far Eastern dispute does essentially depend upon the co-operation of the United States (cheers).

"I say without hesitation that in order to get the full co-operation on an equal basis of the United States Government in an international conflict I would travel not only from Geneva to Brussels but from Melbourne to Alaska, more particularly in the present state of the international situation. I am sorry that the honorable member made derogatory references to the man who was until lately Prime Minister of Belgium (M. Van Zeeland).

"The honorable member: I had not the slightest intention of doing so.

"Eden: I am very glad to have this cleared up. He referred to M. Van Zeeland as the cat's-paw of His Majesty's government. Did he mean that?

"The honorable member: I meant that His Majesty's government had used him as an agent. It was obviously very difficult for M. Van Zeeland to refuse and I regret very greatly that the government did use him.

Anglo-Saxons To Bear Peace Burden in East

America, Britain Should Share Responsibility, Observer Says.

By Europax.

Special Correspondence of The Post.
Copyright, 1937, for The Washington Post.

Brussels, Nov. 1.—America's presence at the Brussels Conference on the Far East is the key to the intense interest with which all Europe is watching this Nine-Power meeting.

The truth is that, to most of the countries of continental Europe, absorbed in the Spanish crisis with its explosive repercussions on European peace problems, the Sino-Japanese conflict seems very far away and relatively unimportant. Only as it affects and links up with the Mediterranean imbroglio does the Oriental conflagration really arouse much concern on the Continent generally. But to the degree that troubles in the Pacific tend to bring the United States into active collaboration with the European powers in efforts to restore or preserve peace, these Far Eastern events assume a double significance for Europe.

The gathering in Brussels is, of course, not the first time Washington has sent delegates to European Conference tables. The present occasion, however, is different—or at least Europe hopes that it may prove to be different. None of the previous meetings—the Geneva Disarmament Conference, the World Economic Conference, the recent Sugar Conference in London—had any marked success, and none of

Eden Thunders 'No Dictation,' Assailing Duce

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

London, Nov. 1.—Great Britain suddenly turned her anger upon Italy tonight, after months of cautious maneuvering, when Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden berated Premier Mussolini for his support of Germany's colonial demands.

As Eden attacked Il Duce in the House of Commons—warning "we accept dictation from no one!"—Britain's biggest warship, the cruiser Hood, steamed into Barcelona on the Spanish east coast to investigate the sinking of the freighter Jean Weems by a "pirate" warplane.

Unconfirmed dispatches, attributed to the Spanish loyalist intelligence service, said the plane that sank the Jean Weems was piloted by Bruno Mussolini, son of Il Duce, who flew to Spain three weeks ago to join Generalissimo Franco's air force.

Eden's attack on Mussolini, the most vigorous speech in his career, flatly repudiated Il Duce's public statement that the peace of Europe can not be secure until Germany's war-lost colonies are returned.

The dapper young foreign secretary then dumfounded the opposition critics of his foreign policy by announcing the Mediterranean "antipiracy" pact had greatly benefited the loyalists.

He said a protest to the Spanish insurgents regarding the "pirate" attack on the Jean Weems was being prepared.

Foreign Developments.

Text of Anthony Eden's remarks to the British Commons showed last night the British Foreign Secretary had not sought to place responsibility for the Nine-Power Treaty Conference on this country, as had been reported through the day.

British anger was turned suddenly upon Italy when Eden berated Mussolini for his support of Germany's demand for return of her colonies.

A Japanese "invasion" of the American defense zone at Shanghai brought a stern American protest and the promised return of a Chinese rice cargo, object of the Japanese foray.

Accord Confirmed.

By Sidney Olson.

Copyright, 1937, by The Washington Post.

America and Great Britain continue to work in complete accord in preparation for the Nine-Power Treaty Conference to open in Brussels tomorrow, it was revealed last night, when the exact and corrected text of a speech by Britain's foreign secretary, Anthony Eden, was received here at the State Department.

Although superficial accounts of Eden's remarks before the House of Commons yesterday indicated he had placed on the United States responsibility for taking the initiative in planning the conference, his actual words conveyed a different meaning. He said:

"I feel I ought to make it quite plain that the initiative for holding the conference in Brussels never came from us at all, but from the United States Government itself."

2 Words Make Difference.

The stress should be placed on the words "in Brussels," as a reading of the text, published herewith, will show.

Eden also said:

"Any action taken at Brussels must depend on the co-operation of the United States. To secure that co-operation I would travel not only from Geneva to Brussels but from Melbourne to Alaska."

The stunned, all day silence of official Washington at newspaper reports which gave the words a totally different meaning contrasted with the reams of speculative copy that filled newspapers in major world capitals through the day, much of it hinting both the Berlin-Rome axis and the Japanese policy in China would be stiffened considerably at such indications the United States and Great Britain were not co-operating in entire accord.

Tight-lipped officials at the State Department had drawn a shroud of secrecy over their reactions, but breathed easier when the official text was received last night.

Will Match U. S. Action.

Eden also promised, with what he described as his own "appalling frankness," that Great Britain would go "as far as the United States" in measures to end the Sino-Japanese war.

Speaking on the eve of the Brussels meeting, just before his own departure to join in tomorrow's deliberations, he stressed that "any action that can be taken in the Far

Chiefs of 7 U. S. Agencies See 'Son Jimmy;' Find Presidential 'Clearing House' Helpful

President Roosevelt's strapping "little son, Jimmy," took the confidential problems of seven independent Government agencies on his husky shoulders yesterday and set about "getting some results."

ALTMEYER.

It was the first day James had functioned as his father's "clearing house" on the administrative and policy troubles of 18 independent offices.

Ten chiefs of agencies were listed for half-hour interviews. Seven showed up. And the day was nicely rounded off by a conference with Charles Michelson, the Democratic Party's No. 1 publicity man.

"Are you an independent office?" reporters asked Michelson.

"No," jibed Michelson. "Fact is, I'm making a speech up in New York tomorrow, and I just dropped in to get James to write it for me."

The three absentees at the first day's "clearing" were Marriner Eccles, chairman of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve Board, who was conferring more directly with the President at Hyde Park; Chairman Jesse Jones, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, on vacation, and Gov. W. I. Myers of the Farm Credit Administration, who was ill.

Oldest of the Roosevelt sons, and newest addition to the White House secretariat, the 6-foot lad the President used to call his "little son Jimmy" said a "multitude of details" were discussed with the seven who called, but declined to divulge them.

"Obviously, there can't be an announcement from me," he said. "All of these things are in the preliminary stage."

Col. Roosevelt (United States Marine Corps Reserves) was told that most of the chiefs said they liked the weekly "clearing house" idea, but Jimmy, like his father, is a practical man.

MISS DEWSON.

"I think it will work out all right if I can get some results for them," he said.

"If it works out, I guess they will think it's fine. If it doesn't work out, well, probably they will think it's another baloney set-up."

The weekly interview plan was announced to the independent office heads by Jimmy himself ten days ago at a White House luncheon. He set Monday and Tuesday of each week aside for half-hour talks with

Social Security Audit Change Costs Jobs of 60

500 Workers Dropped by PWA; Other Cuts Are Expected.

About 60 of the 620 employes in the tax unit of the Internal Revenue Bureau will lose their jobs, it was believed yesterday, with announcement that auditing of tax returns under the social security act will be transferred to collectors' offices throughout the country.

Although about 310 employes of the tax unit here will be released, approximately four-fifths of these will be absorbed, it is anticipated, by a gradual increase in the number of employes in the collectors' offices. Those not so re-assigned or appointed to other duty will receive 30 days' notice of release, plus accumulations of annual leave.

Simultaneously with this announcement came word that about 500 field employes were dropped yesterday from the Public Works Administration pay rolls as the new regional set-up became effective. There are now approximately 6,822 PWA employes on the rolls, as compared with 10,838 employed in April, 1936.

The substitution of 7 regional districts for the 48 separate State units existing heretofore was the immediate cause of yesterday's reduction in personnel. More cuts are anticipated as the existing program of public works nears completion.

The 600 employes in the former housing division were transferred yesterday by executive order to the new Housing Authority. Nathan Straus, the new administrator, will today take over the new organization.

SEC Reports Cost Of Floating Issue

In a publication of statistical data on costs of issuing securities, the Securities Exchange Commission yesterday said expenses of registration and flotation of 127 bond issues, 11 preferred stock issue and 103 common stock issues amounted, respectively, to .62, 68 and 1.35 per cent of the gross proceeds.

The compilation was made from registration statements filed under the securities act of 1933 covering the period from July 1, 1936, to September 30, 1937, the commission said, adding:

"All the tabulatoins are based on registered issues which have been selected on these bases: Their size measured by gross proceeds was $1,000,000 or over; there was a record of public offering, and they were offered through investment bankers. These data should be used cautiously as indications of trends of underwriting spreads, interest rates, etc., since the changes in the averages from one period to another may represent a shift in the relative importance of one type of company or issue as contrasted with another."

Miss Hannah McLaughlin, 56, of 622 Fifth street northeast, a teacher in Blair School, was seriously injured last night when struck down by a "hit-run" driver at 500 H street northeast. She was preparing to board a street car when she was hurled to the street by an automobile bearing Virginia tags.

She was found lying unconscious in the street by A. J. Constable of 312 Fourteenth street northeast, who rushed her to Casualty Hospital. There she was said to have suffered chest contusions, shock and a possible ruptured liver.

Antionetta Sciscent, 60, of 5321 Sixteenth street northwest, received multiple abrasions, a dislocated left shoulder and a possible skull fracture when she was struck by an automobile last night while crossing Colorado avenue in the 5200 block. The driver of the car, who police said was John A. Williams, 25, of Maryland, was not held.

His petition declared that for some reason unknown to him he had "incited the animosity and enmity of his successor at Savannah," and that the latter "conspiring with certain officers from the Corps of Engineers, secretly manufactured charges of improper conduct in the letting of harbor contracts."

The result, he said, was that an honest soldier was convicted of a crime he never committed.

Crime Fighters Open Program In D. C. Today

Police Officials, Civic Leaders, Experts to Convene in Luncheon Session.

A concrete crime prevention program for the District will get under way today when more than a score of police officials, crime experts and civic leaders assemble at the Willard Hotel for a luncheon meeting.

The meeting, first step in an effort by District leaders to devise an effective crime prevention system, will be presided over by Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Post.

Dr. Thomas W. Hopkins, of the Jersey City public school system, will address the meeting which is sponsored by the Washington Criminal Justice Association and the Institute of Criminal Science.

"Cities can save themselves hundreds of thousands of dollars in the cost of institutionalizing criminals," Dr. Hopkins said, "by simply utilizing already existing agencies and facilities for preventing the development of the criminal. This is not idealistic theory, but demonstrated fact."

Leaders who have announced they will attend include, Dr. Frank Ballou, Judge Fay Bentley, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, Joseph E. Dayton, Clarence Phelps Dodge, Dr. Ruth Coyner, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Wilbur Laroe, jr., Lowell Mellett, Patricia Morss, Dr. Chester Holmes, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, James E. Colliflower, Newbold Noyes, Frank F. Nesbit, Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, Vincent Saccardi, Dr. Harvey Smith, William Roy Vallance, Ella Werner and Mrs. Harvey Wiley.

Dr. James A. Nolan, of the Criminal Justice Association, said yesterday, "The co-operative effort of existing agencies here should result not only in the economic saving of the taxpayer's money, but in the even more important result of diminishing the commission of crime by those who may thus be removed from thec riminal classification."

Patrick B. Kelly, executive director of the Institute of Criminal Science, said, "The only effective program for crime prevention is that which under trained leadership, academically qualified to engage in the task, unites with all the forces of society in a constructive, educational effort."

Dr. Hopkins also will lecture tonight at the Wardman Park Hotel as the fifth speaker in the Crime Clinic being conducted on Tuesday evenings by the Institute of Criminal Science.

Now it is the great, cathedral-like reception room, where Postmaster General Farley's visitors meditate in upholstered leather chairs, that is getting the attention. In this room last week were set in place the series of medallion wood carvings by Gleb Derujinksy, an associate National Academician. The medallions are bas-relief portraits of early Postmasters General.

Overlooked by the scores who come daily to glimpse the murals, but affording something on which Mr. Farley's visitors may fasten a contemplative eye, are the life-size figures of Samuel Osgood, first Postmaster General, and Benjamin Franklin, organizer of the American postal system, in the respective entrance halls.

The Osgood statue in the north hall is the work of Paul Manship, one of the foremost contemporary sculptors, now a member of the Fine Arts Commission. It is of white marble, in the classic style harmonizing with the Baroque paneling of the hall and reception room. It portrays Gen. Osgood in the uniform and cloak he wore in the Revolutionary War.

Income Decline In '38 Forecast By U.S. Experts

Letdown in Business Will Continue 'Temporarily,' Economists Say.

By the Associated Press.

Government trade analysts predicted yesterday the let-down in business would continue into 1938 and that the national income for that year would be lower than in 1937.

The forecast came from the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, which makes a survey of Government and private data at this time each year for the guidance of farmers who are making arrangements for next year's production and marketing.

National income will be less than the estimated $69,000,000,000 for 1937.

Prices and buying power of farm products will decline.

Exports of farm products, except possibly cotton, will increase in volume, but will move at lower prices.

Government "pump priming" moves—such as large relief expenditures—will taper off.

The economists said there were indications that the economic recession would be only temporary.

They declared that all general recovery periods, such as the one since 1932-33, have been characterized by short periods of recession.

At such times "business sentiment becomes less optimistic, security prices decline, and businessmen postpone expensive commitments for expansion or rehabilitation."

All of these lead to "hesitant buying" by consumers, the bureau said, and eventually cause stocks to pile up in retail stores, wholesale channels and at factories.

Business has entered "such a phase" this fall, the bureau said, "following the period of decided optimism in the winter of 1936-37."

The economists said the "tendency to curtail Government spending and expansion of credit by deficit financing through banks" would remove stimuli that had spurred business and industry since 1933. Business will have to take up the slack, they added.

The bureau found several "favorable factors" which, it said, indicated that the present recession was temporary.

"Business debts are low," the report said, "credit is cheap and plentiful, banking resources are not strained, there is no building boom, and there has been an absence of violent speculation of the type which generally precedes the end of a business boom."

'How to Worry' Topic.

David Seabury, of New York City, lecturer on psychology and author of "How to Worry Successfully," will use this title of his recent book as the subject of an address at 8 p. m. Thursday before the forum of the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church at Chevy Chase circle. The speech will emphasize methods of meeting workaday experiences with healthy attitudes.

Parley Studies Problem Child In Rural Areas

Difficulties of Youngsters Are Greater Than in Cities, Conferees Say.

It's no fun to be a problem child in the country, the Rural Youth Institute pointed out at opening of a three-day session yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel. Teachers and vocational leaders in city schools can help overcome difficulties confronting youth, but in rural sections young people have to fend for themselves, with small success, it was declared.

Fifty youth leaders from Southern States have registered for the institute, sponsored by the Southern Woman's Educational Alliance. Discussion centers around need for information about rural occupations, vocational counseling, vocational education and rural placement services.

Illustrative of the need for vocational training in country schools was a case presented by a Virginia teacher. Two girls, aged 15 and 16, still are in elementary grades but have reached a point where they must become partially self-supporting. Both are adept at crocheting and rug-making and, with additional training, could profit by their skill. Such training is not available, however.

Another case discussed yesterday was that of a North Carolina farm boy, who fails consistently in academic work and is growing restless. His only interest is highway safety and he would like to make a career of that field. But because there is no one to whom he can turn for advice as to how to prepare himself, he will be unable to pursue his interest.

At today's meeting delegates will discuss agencies already existing in rural areas and progress they are making in solving the rural youth problem.

Dr. O. Latham Hatcher, founder and president of the Southern Woman's Educational Alliance, is in charge of the institute. Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the District of Columbia Board of Education, spoke briefly yesterday. John A. Lang, CCC administrative assistant in the United States Office of Education, also spoke.

18 Girls Shut Up For Riot at D. C. Reform School

Street Discounts Disturbance, Says Situation Will Be Mastered.

Describing yesterday's "breakfast riot" at the National Training School for Girls as the "natural result of clamping down to get the situation under control," Elwood Street, director of Public Welfare, announced that the matter will be handled by Acting Superintendent Dr. James Lewald and Acting Assistant Superintendent Margaret Corridon.

"I feel confident that Dr. Lewald and Mrs. Corridon can adequately supervise the situation," he said.

Confusion and disorder reigned at the training school yesterday at breakfast time, when the inmates discovered that the regular bacon and eggs would not be served. They were served hash instead.

18 Girls "Isolated."

Picking up knives and other utensils from the tables the inmates rushed toward several men employes and attempted to take their keys, attaches reported.

Five white girls of the total 37 inmates took no part in the disturbance, it was stated.

Of the remaining colored inmates, 18 were placed in "isolation"—locked in their rooms or prison cells.

"They will remain in isolation until they are willing to obey the rules of this institution," Lewald said.

Police were summoned by someone outside of the institution, he asserted.

"Despite the bedlam that ensued, we would not have put in a riot call," Lewald said.

New Head to Be Named.

Several girls received minor injuries when they broke windows and were treated at the school, Dr. Lewald said.

Commenting after the uprising, Lewald said that "bacon and eggs were not served because there weren't any available."

A new head of the National Training School to succeed Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith will be appointed within the month, Street announced yesterday. The usual procedure of procuring an eligible list from the Civil Service Commission and approval by the Commissioners will prevail.

Loyalists Prefer Death to Fascism, U. S. Friends Told

"The Spanish people are fighting to repel a Fascist invasion," Charles Flaherty last night told a meeting of the Washington Chapter of the Friends of the Abraham Lincoln Battalion, fighting with the loyalist army in Spain.

Bearing the marks of wounds received in battle, he was supported in his belief by his brother, Frank, also injured in battle, who declared that the "Spanish people do not want war, but they are determined to defend their country to the death rather than permit to to become a Fascist colony."

Both speakers asserted that withdrawal of foreign "volunteers" would decrease the Spanish government's army only slightly, but would remove more than two-thirds of the armed forces now fighting under the leadership of Gen. Francisco Franco.

John Carmody, administrator of the Rural Electrification Administration, presided at the meeting, held in the Pythian Temple. Other speakers included Adolfo Garcia Fernandez, of Havana, Cuba, and Leonard Engels, secretary of the local chapter of the Friends of the Abraham Lincoln Battalion.

Nicaragua Troops At Honduran Gates

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, Nov. 1 (AP).—Reliable reports tonight stated that Nicaraguan troops had been sent to the Honduras-Nicaraguan frontier virtually on the eve of a mediation conference, with United States participation, to settle the "postage stamp" border dispute.

These reports said that 5,000 fully equipped troops already had been dispatched to the border. Honduran sources said such a troop movement was in violation of the September 7 agreement in which the two nations promised not to send military forces to their mutual boundary.

The first mediation meeting is scheduled in San Jose, Costa Rica, Wednesday.

Mother, 5 She Slew To Occupy 1 Grave

Norwalk, Iowa, Nov. 1 (AP).—A 20-foot grave tonight awaited the bodies of Mrs. G. R. McAninch and her five children whom she shot to death in their sleep before turning the gun on herself.

G. R. McAninch, the father, who was being held in jail for investigation at the time of the tragedy, sobbed while he watched workmen dig the grave.

40 Are Treated As HOLC Staff Starts Clinic

More than 40 cases were handled yesterday by staff doctors of the Group Health Association, Inc., when the HOLC employes' clinic opened for business at 1328 I street northwest.

The day's work included two calls at the homes of sick employes as well as several minor operations performed at the clinic. Dr. Henry Rolf Brown, in charge of the new group health scheme, expressed himself as delighted with the functioning of the organization on its first day and reported heavy booking of appointments for the remainder of the week.

Praising yesterday's Post editorial on "Co-operation For Health," association officials ordered 1,000 copies of the article for distribution among HOLC employes.

The new clinic is the first of its kind established in Washington for white-collar workers.

R. V. Rickord, of the Twentieth Century Fund, a New York philanthropic organization, inspected the clinic quarters on Saturday and after discussing the organization with staff doctors described the set-up as the "most advanced in the country."

More than 50 per cent of the 2,000 employes of the HOLC and affiliated agencies have already joined the association, and will pay $2.20 a month, entitling them to consultation, surgical operations and hospitalization up to three weeks. Employes can secure medical service for themselves and their dependents for $3.30 a month.

The directors of the HOLC have granted the clinic $20,000 this year, and will duplicate the sum in 1938, to enable the association to meet initial expenses for equipment and organization. After 1938, it is believed, the clinic will be self-supporting.

Hollywood, Nov. 1 (U.P.).—A Federal court judge today ordered Groucho and Chico Marx, of the movie comedy team, to pay fines of $1,000 each for pirating a copyrighted radio script. Under the charge, a misdemeanor, on which a Federal court jury swiftly convicted them last Saturday, a maximum jail sentence of one year could have been imposed.

Borah Reiterates His Opposition to Mid-Term Parley

Chicago, Nov. 1 (AP).—Senator William E. Borah reiterated his opposition to a proposed mid-term convention of the Republican party today.

"There is no machinery by which the people could elect delegates to a convention," he stated, "and to hold a convention without the people having a voice as to its membership would be a great mistake."

Tokyo Editor Sees New World War if Conflict Lasts Year

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—A prediction that a new world war will break out within a year unless the Sino-Japanese conflict is ended before that time was voiced today by Shingoro Takaishi, Japanese publisher of the Tokyo newspaper Nichi Nichi.

"If the conflict goes on another year, Russia will probably come in—and that will be the beginning of another great war. Germany will back Japan, France has a military alliance to support Russia, and other nations may not be able to help becoming involved.

"Our hope is that America will remain neutral—will remain a good judge."

Takaishi is en route to Europe on a good-will mission. He said he spoke from knowledge gathered in conversations with Japan's war ministers, cabinet and prime minister, and declared:

"Japan will not draw back a step. We will fight Russia."

Mrs. Hahn Sobs Denial That She Slew Aging Man

Poison Victim Like a Father, Tried to Save Him, Blonde Says.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Nov. 1.—Anna Marie Hahn entered blanket denials today of State charges that she fatally poisoned four aging men for their meager fortunes, and said of one of them: "He was more like a father to me."

Testifying in her own behalf at her murder trial, the 31-year-old defendant denied she forged the "last will" of Jacob Wagner, in which she was named beneficiary. She insisted that she had ministered carefully to the elderly gardener during the week preceding his death June 3.

Son, 12, Defends Mother.

Two handwriting experts testified for the State that the will was in Mrs. Hahn's handwriting.

Mrs. Hahn's appearance in the stand followed that of her 12-year-old son, Oscar. The blue-eyed youngster testified in an effort to refute State testimony concerning his mothers acquaintance with George Obendoerfer, 67-year-old cobbler who died in Colorado Springs, August 1, and evidence by which a bottle of poison, found in the Hahn home, was traced to her.

Under questioning by Chief Defense Counsel Joseph H. Hoodin, Oscar said he owned a toy chemical set, played with it in the basement of the house and frequently added to his supply of chemicals by picking up cast-off bottles from a vacant lod adjacent to a nearby hospital.

The woman is on trial charged with the murder by poison of Wagner; she is charged also in the death of George Gsellman, 67, and Judge Charles S. Bell admitted "collateral evidence" in the death of Obendoerfer, elderly cobbler, and Albert J. Palmer, 72-year-old retired rail watchman.

Won $540 on Horse.

In testimony concerning each death, Hoodin asked:

"Did you at any time put anything in anything that he ate," and each time Mrs. Hahn answered:

"I did not."

She insisted she "never cooked anything" for Gsellman, in whose home State chemists testified they found left-overs of food in pans containing sufficient poison to kill three or four persons.

Mrs. Hahn pictured Palmer, who died March 26, as "a very fine man . . . more like a father to me and my boy," and explained a $2,000 note, payable to Palmer, by saying:

"I didn't use all of the money he gave me, only about $500."

She said she met Palmer at a bookmaking establishment.

On July 5—the day before Gsellman was found dead—she declared she won $540 on one horse.

Speaking in low voice and with marked German accent, Mrs. Hahn testified she met Wagner, a retired gardener, and when he "came to my house thinking we were some relationship and saying he had corresponded with my parents."

Killer Bird Given 45 Years in Jail

Cleveland, Nov. 1 (AP).—The Government sentenced Frank Bird, fugitive Missouri killer, to 45 years in prison for bank robbery today, and separated him from Sylvia Sieber Bird, the 21-year-old Cleveland nursemaid he enmeshed in a life of crime.

Bird, who escaped from jail here last September with his brother Charles—still a fugitive—pleaded in court for leniency toward his wife.

"I talked her into it," he said. "It was not her fault."

Md. Killer Sane; Faces W. Va. Rope

Charleston, W. Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—Two doctors told Gov. Holt today that William Brown Read, condemned torch slayer of W. Earle Dollman, is sane.

In a report filed after they examined Read at the State prison in Moundsville, Dr. George Johnson and Dr. W. D. Wayne, of Spencer, asserted:

"From the history and examination of this man, he has had a good opportunity from birth to the present time and has deliberately refused to take advantage of his better opportunities and has resorted to crime."

Read, 25-year-old resident of Four Corners, Md., is scheduled to die Friday for the fatal beating of Dollman, a Charleston salesman, last Thanksgiving Eve. Dollman had stopped near Gassaway to help three stranded motorists get gasoline.

Treasury Chief to See 'I'd Rather Be Right'

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau has a seat for the Broadway premiere of "I'd Rather Be Right," which suggests a number of freakish ways to balance the budget.

He was the only high official from Washington known to have a ticket for the George M. Cohan satire which opens Tuesday night. He was invited to attend as the guest of Earle Baffie, Wall Street investment broker and former Treasury aide. Cohan plays the role of the President in the comedy lampooning Government figures.

U.S. and Britain Still in Accord, Eden Declares

Eastern dispute does essentially depend on the co-operation of the United States of America."

It was pointed out the sub-committee of the League Assembly—a group charged with advisory responsibility on Far Eastern affairs—drafted the report at Geneva suggesting an emergency conference of the signatories of the Nine-Power Treaty.

While it was admitted the sub-committee hastily redrafted its report in more vigorous language after learning of the President's remarks in Chicago that day, October 5, officials here held that the United States neither took nor shirked the initiative in the conference.

Observers also noted that when the conference was suggested, London and Washington were both ruled out at once as locales for the sessions for the obvious reason that no nation wished to appear more responsible for the conference's findings than another nation. The Hague was then vetoed and Brussels selected because Belgium has apparently no stake in the Far East.

Ambassador at Large Norman Davis, now in Brussels, is in entire charge of American negotiations and is free to act as he sees fit. Secretary of State Cordell Hull is in Pinehurst, N. C., for a three or four day vacation, his first in more than a year.

Davis and the American delegation were hurried directly to Brussels, with only the briefest Paris stop, in order to avoid the slightest suggestion prior commitments were being made in any form.

Associated Press reports from London said members of Parliament were divided last night on the extent of the American measures to which Eden had pledged Britain's support.

British opposition party members interpreted the President's Chicago speech as meaning severance of relations with Japan. Conservatives scoffed at this.

In Brussels yesterday American delegates made it clear they would not "go out on a limb" to take greater responsibility than other powers in efforts to mediate the Sino-Japanese war.

Commenting on the Eden statement, delegates said they would lend fullest co-operation.

Meanwhile, a high Japanese authority in Brussels predicted the official Japanese recommendation to the Nine-Power Conference would be that the conference end as quickly as possible after getting Japan and China to begin direct peace negotiations.

The Japanese attitude, the source said, is one of fear the conference, unable to preserve amicable discussions, might only add to Oriental bitterness on both sides. Japanese confidence is particularly placed in Joseph C. Grew and Sir Robert Leslie Craigie, American and British ambassadors to Tokyo, as possible mediators.

Officials also indicated their belief the complicated situation might be further tangled if the conference proposed an armistice in the Far East war, as they believe China will definitely oppose any armistice on the grounds Japan would then dig in in its newly-conquered territory.

"Eden: I hope the honorable member will carry his explanation a little further because I must do justice to a man who is just now in a very difficult position.

"Then the honorable member implied it was as a result of pressure from us that the conference had been held in Brussels. It isn't always easy to lift the veil of diplomacy but as this is a small matter in itself though perhaps rather important to one person I feel I ought to make it quite plain that as a matter of fact the initiative for the holding of the conference in Brussels never came from us at all but from the United States Government itself. (Ministerial cheers).

"The honorable member: May I ask if that request came after the decision had been made that there should be a conference outside Geneva?

"Eden: Naturally nobody could suggest a meeting place for the conference until it had been arranged that a conference should be held.

"The honorable member: Didn't Mr. Cordell Hull make it perfectly plain that he would rather go to Geneva than go outside?

"Eden: No, the honorable member is quite mistaken. The point I am making is once it was agreed that the Nine-Power conference should be held it was the United States Government that suggested Brussels as a meeting place and not us. Therefore the charge that M. Van Zeeland is our cat's-paw is wholly unjustified (cheers)."

the government benches and cheered loudly when Eden, referring to Mussolini, said:

"I have noticed a tendency to use, as a part of diplomatic machinery, methods which are highly dangerous. There is an inclination to threaten, issue orders from the housetops, proclaim what are virtually ultimatums—and call it peace.

"Such methods will never have any response from here!"

Cheers drowned out his words.

"Such orders never will be obeyed by the British public. We are ready to make our contribution to peace in the world and to discuss the difficulties with those concerned, but we are not prepared to stand and deliver at anyone's command . . . we will work whole-heartedly with other nations, but we will not accept dictation."

Eden curtly challenged Mussolini's right and good faith in intervening in the colonial dispute.

"Recently," he said, "a country which gained considerable possessions as an outcome of war has championed Germany's claim to African possessions.

"As between Germany and this country I desire to say nothing, but I deny the right of any government to call upon us to make a contribution when there is no evidence that it is prepared to do likewise."

Warming up to his attack, Eden went at the opposition with hammer and tongs, particularly the venerable David Lloyd George, who had charged the International Non-intervention Committee played into the hands of Franco.

Eden cited figures showing non-intervention without recognition of belligerency rights for Franco had deprived the Spanish insurgents of control of the seacoasts and permitted the loyalists to receive huge cargoes of war supplies.

He also quoted the Soviet Russian military journal's description of the loyalist government's "overwhelming superiority in the air."

"The practical result of the Nyon 'antipiracy' pact, though not its aim, has been to facilitate the arrival of large quantities of material in Spanish government ports," he said. "Spain is now Soviet Russia's third best customer."

Rounding out the speech which he himself described as having "appalling frankness," Eden hammered home these two points:

1. "We will join no anti-Communist bloc and no anti-Fascist bloc."

2. "The British government is in continuous consulation with Egypt over the threat of continued Italian troop reinforcements in Libya."

The foreign secretary, about to depart for the Far Eastern peace conference in Brussels, said Great Britain was consulting with the French government on a plan of strengthening the "antipiracy" patrol of the Mediterranean in event of any further attacks.

The British ambassador to Spain, Sir Henry Chilton, has been instructed to make a strong protest to the insurgents, he explained, and a "full inquiry" was under way.

Roosevelt to Dine Windsors; Sir Ronald's Plans Doubtful

British Envoy, Debarking at New York, Says He Must See Wife Regarding Entertainment; Ernest Simpson Arrives on Business.

Charles Bedaux, who were the closest friends of the duke and duchess between the time of the abdication and their marriage, arrived on the liner Europa tonight. Bedaux will have general charge of the tour of the duke and duchess.

The duke and duchess arive next week for an inspection of housing and labor conditions. Their first stop after New York is expected to be Washington. It seemed fairly certain that Mrs. Roosevelt would not be at the White House to greet them, for she leaves November 4 on a lecture tour and will not return to the Capital until November 23. No decision has been made on the number of guests or the degree of formality of the function.

Smiling and unruffled by all the furore created by his former wife, Simpson said he had come to the United States on business, including possible purchase by British interests of the old liner Leviathan. He greeted newspapermen affably and said:

"I trust that all of you are gentlemen, and as you realize I have never said anything to the press about the circumstances (his wife's divorce), you will understand that I have nothing to say now."

He paused, and added, "When do we get a drink?"

Sir Ronald to Help Duke.

Newspapermen then sought out Sir Ronald to inquire what part the British Embassy would play in the tour of the duke and duchess.

"I imagine he will want certain facilities," the Ambassador said, "and I shall be glad and proud to give him what he wants."

"What will be the policy of the embassy when the duke reaches Washington?" Sir Ronald was asked.

"We haven't any policy," he replied. "The duke may want a certain amount of help and if he does I shall give it to him. I have only vague indications of what his plans are. I have them on a bit of paper but they are so subject to change that I wouldn't want to show them to you."

The Ambassador said he could see no possibility of a "delicate situation" arising during the duke's visit if he "avoids politics as much as possible."

"Are you going to give a dinner for him in Washington?"

"I shall have to consult my wife," Sir Ronald said, laughing.

By the United Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Nov. 1.—The Spanish loyalists warned tonight, as the insurgents mobilized 75,000 men for a "win-the-war" offensive on the Aragon front, that they are holding the relatives of several enemy commanders as hostages in a Valencia prison.

The hostages include a niece of Generalissimo Franco, who journeyed to the Aragon front yesterday to map the big drive to the seacoast that will start as soon as flood waters recede.

The loyalists said the hostages also included the mother and sister of Gen. Miguel Aranda, hero of the siege of Oviedo, who will command one of the insurgent armies in Aragon, and a sister of Gen. Milan Astray, one-armed commander of the Spanish foreign legion.

Loyalist authorities asserted the hostages were in no immediate danger, but it was indicated they might become the instruments of reprisal if Generalissimo Franco's forces break through to the Mediterranean Coast and cut off Valencia from Barcelona.

Loyalist War Minister Indalecio Prieto today published a decree from the new capital at Barcelona mobilizing the military class of 1939—boys as young as 17—throughout loyalist Spain. They must report to military headquarters before November 15 and will add an estimated 50,000 recruits to meet the enemy offensive in Aragon.

Moves to Make Amends for 'Invasion,' Averts Clash; Chinese Claim Gains.

fu, and that with the conclusion of that campaign Japan would consider major phases of the North China fighting as virtually ended. Foreign observers believed, however, Japan will keep her North China armies of 200,000 men in the field until the Chinese have been driven south of the Yellow River and until Japan has established a dominant position in Shantung Province.

The clash between the United States Marines and the Japanese attracted more attention than the fighting around the foreign areas.

It started at noon yesterday when a Japanese bluejacket, on sentry duty in the Chapei area, fired over a Chinese junk unloading rice on the south side of the creek under the guns of U. S. Marines in the Siza road sector.

The sentry's fire, which was not answered by the Marines, drew a large detachment of Japanese bluejackets, under a petty officer. They crossed the creek by jumping from sampan to sampan in the boat-packed stream.

The Japanese boarded the junk, a comparatively large one, and forced it to cross to their side of the stream and unload its cargo there.

Gen. Beaumont immediately reported the incident to Admiral Hasegawa, who apologized but refused to return the rice.

It was emphasized the American authorities cannot permit creation of a precedent which would permit the Japanese to cross at will to the American side of the creek, border between the Japanese and American-controlled areas.

British authorities also were involved in a new quarrel with the Japanese, serious since it followed the killing of five British soldiers and the wounding of ten others by stray shells—allegedly Japanese.

The incident had to do with the Chinese "lost battalion" which escaped into the British defense area from warehouses in Chapei on Sunday.

Chinese were bringing pressure to bear on the municipal council of the Settlement to release the men, and Japanese suspected the British, who have been friendly to Chinese throughout the long Shanghai battle were prepared to acquiesce.

The Japanese protested bitterly to the council, which is largely British-controlled, but the council deferred its reply. It was understood, however, the council had decided to keep the Chinese heroes interned for the duration of hostilities.

London, Nov. 1 (AP).—The Japanese Embassy said today it had been informed officially that investigation showed Japanese shells killed the four British soldiers hit by shrapnel at Shanghai Friday.

The embassy said Japanese Foreign Minister Koki Hirota had communicated his government's "regret at this unfortunate affair" to the British Ambassador at Tokyo.

Previously the embassy announced a Japanese investigation disclosed there was "no shelling by Japanese military or marine forces" at the time the soldiers were struck by shell fragments.

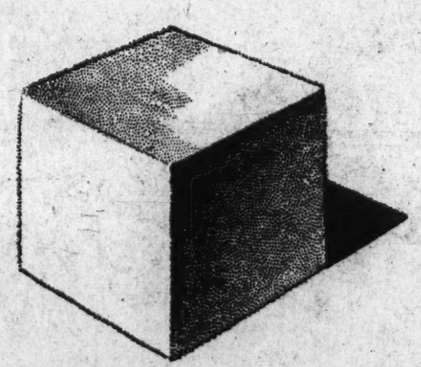
This block of Aluminum NOW 7¢

Reduced from $2.66



The chunk of aluminum pictured is exactly the size of a pound of iron. It's worth 7 cents. Fifty years ago, it would have cost $2.66. (You know of course that aluminum weighs only a third as much as iron.)

Aluminum sold for 8 dollars a pound fifty years ago, and wasn't of much use to anyone — just a novelty.

It sells in bulk for 20 cents a pound today, and is useful to everyone.

Considering the thousand ways in which aluminum, bought from foreign and domestic sources, is used by scores of manufacturers in the United States, you'd think others here besides ourselves would reduce it from its ores. There is a plentiful supply of ore, and the process is well known and available to all.

Others seemingly are unwilling to risk the investment necessary to produce raw aluminum in this country to sell for 20 cents a pound.

Because of the extreme difficulty and costliness of getting aluminum out of its ores, 20-cent aluminum is surprisingly cheap aluminum.

Naturally, we want aluminum to be as cheap as it possibly can be, in order that the use of it will increase.

sioner James K. Cullen in Baltimore.

The charge, which is taken from the Federal statute entitled "inciting to mutiny and revolt," grows out of the conduct of the crew in the harbor of Montevideo, Uruguay, on September 10.

The Government, as represented by the Maritime Commission and the Department of Justice, contends that the Algic crew voted to strike "in sympathy" with union stevedores of Montevideo who were on strike when the Algic arrived.

C. I. O. lawyers representing the seamen argue that they struck because their lives were jeopardized by the stevedores, who were cruising about the ship in small boats and yelling threats at the "scab" stevedores and the crew.

Commissioner Cullen will decide whether, in view of the evidence, the Algic sailors should be held for the Baltimore grand jury.

The Algic, an 8,000-ton freighter owned by the Government, is now on the high seas again, with new officers and crew, backtracking on a July-September voyage which was marked by a murder, a drowning, four desertions and three sit-down strikes.

Three of the deserters have been located on the S. S. West Selene, bound from Santos, Brazil, to New York and scheduled to arrive November 8. The fourth deserter left the ship in Jacksonville.

The strike of the Algic's crew at Montevideo was broken when Chairman Kennedy instructed Capt. Joseph Gainard to place the men in irons unless they obeyed orders. Since then a lot of angry language has been directed at Kennedy.

In statements issued by the National Maritime Union, his order was called "notorious," "un-American" and the act of a "dictator." The Baltimore branch of the union "demanded" that President Roosevelt remove Kennedy, and Curran a few days later telegraphed the President he thought the resignation of Kennedy was in order.

Curran's letter to Kennedy, written over the week-end and made public by the Maritime Commission, said that a great deal of furor had been created by the statements that the union was going to "scalp" the chairman.

"In the interests of fairness both to you and to me," Curran said, "I can definitely state that no such quotation was made."

What he actually said at a rally of union seamen in Baltimore, Curran said, was this:

"When a Government agency which has absolutely no authority to render a decision on what is obviously a labor dispute insists on doing so, the chairman of such an agency, regardless of who he may be, should certainly be condemned for such action and asked to resign . . .

"Further, there were absolutely no grounds on which these seamen, who had simply asked for the protection that is guaranteed them under the law in a situation such as existed in Montevideo, should have had proper investigation before a wire ordering such drastic action as putting the men in irons was sent."

Curran said he still felt that Kennedy had "usurped" authority in his handling of the Algic case.

"I deeply regret," Curren concluded, "that the press has confused the issue to such an extent as to directly misquote me. I am not desirous of engaging in a personal dispute with you. I merely wish to point out that I did believe and I still believe that the Maritime Commission was at fault in this matter.

"It is my hope that the Maritime Commission is motivated by the same desire and sincerity as the National Maritime Union in building a strong American Merchant Marine which all Americans can be justly proud of, and that we can find a solution to the Algic case."

the bureau chiefs. He was to go over their problems with them, route the more important policy questions directly to the President and hand minor problems over to subordinates.

He said the questions discussed yesterday "were practically all administrative—the policy matters I'll have to take up with the President."

One of the little matters taken up yesterday was a "lost" letter sent by an independent office head to one of the regular departments. The official thought it important, and yet he had received no reply. Jimmy agreed to find out what happened to the letter and suggest that it be answered immediately.

Later Kennedy told reporters he was very much in favor of the new clearing house set-up and had taken up a number of administrative problems with young Roosevelt.

"As you know," he said, "there are 65 bureaus in the Government dealing with shipping matters, and we can work more effectively through the White House."

Chairman A. J. Altmeyer, of the Social Security Board, was accompanied to the White House by Mary W. Dewson, a member of the board.

"We merely discussed the way we're to co-operate with Mr. Roosevelt in solving out day-to-day administrative problems," said Altmeyer.

He said there were numerous problems that "lap over into other agencies" and he thought it was "a grand opportunity" to lay their problems before James.

"I laid some troubles at his feet," said Chairman Clyde L. Seavey, of the Federal Power Commission, who echoed the expressions of the others that the "conference system is a fine thing." He said the problems he discussed were "not of any great importance at the present, but they might be in the future."

Seavey told reporters it had been difficult in the past to get personal contact with the White House because officials were unwilling to burden a President who was already working under pressure.

Said Commissioner John C. Page, of the Reclamation Bureau:

"There was nothing in particular. The conference was just a getting together on current reclamation problems."

Other who conferred with the President's son were M. L. Wilson, undersecretary of Agriculture Chairman W. A. Ayres, of the Federal Trade Commission; Chairman tuminous Coal Commission, and C. F. Hosford, of the Uational Bi-Chairman J. Warden Madden of the National Labor Relations Board.

James will continue his interviews with officials today.

Father Englebert was born at Williamsville, N. Y., in 1874, and entered the Franciscan Community of the Custody of the Holy Land here. Sent to Nazareth to study, he made silent profession in the Franciscan Order at the Shrine of Calvary.

He was ordained in Jerusalem in 1908 and celebrated his first mass on the altar of Mount Calvary. He began his active ministry in the mother church of the Franciscans in Egypt at the Church of Our Lady of the Assumption at Muski. In 1814 he was assigned to care of the English-speaking Catholics of Cairo, where he served 20 years.

Bailey Says Budget Can Be Balanced

Worcester, Mass., Nov. 1 (AP).—Senator Josiah W. Bailey (Democrat) North Carolina, declared today that if President Roosevelt "meant business" he could balance the budget.

The Senator, in an interview with the Worcester Evening Gazette, said: "If President Roosevelt means business, he can balance the budget. If he does not do so, the United States is in for a period of inflation."

"If the people will let us," added Bailey, here to address the Economic Club tonight, "we can reduce Government expenditures. The present rate is $9,000,000,000; the Government can be run on $3,000,000,000."

30,000 Facing Medical Test in Cafe Clean-up

Rigid Rules to Be Enforced With 15 Days Left for License Renewals.

With less than 15 days in which to renew licenses, Washington restaurant owners faced a rigid system of sanitary inspection yesterday as health authorities opened a determined drive against dirty and unwholesome conditions in public eating places.

Under policies effective for the first time yesterday, all District restaurants and eating establishments must meet health and plumbing department requirements before licenses will be renewed or new ones issued.

An estimated 30,000 cafe employes who handle food consumed by the "eating out" public will be required to pass medical examinations. Strict inspection officers, using scientific methods, will rate restaurants according to sanitary practices, facilities and general conditions. The perfect score of 100 per cent cannot be attained unless every requirement is met, Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, warned.

"We will not be deceived any more by the pouring of chlorine into dishwaters when the food inspector arrives in order to cover up faulty cleansing of utensils. Disinfection of the washing water must be carried out regularly," Dr. Ruhland declared.

At the same time yesterday George Offutt, chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, warned restaurant men to file license applications immediately in order to assure receipt of liquor permits by February 1.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Washington Choral Society, under the direction of Louis A. Potter, presents Brahms' "German Requiem" in Washington Cathedral Monday night, assisted by members of the National Symphony Orchestra and Robert Barrow, organist; soloists: Ruby Potter and Edwin C. Steffe.

Thanks to the added seating accommodation in the north transept and crossing of the cathedral, last evening's audience was about twice as large as the one that attended the performnace of the Brahms "Requiem" by the Washington Choral Society last January. The size of the assemblage testified both to the public interest in major choral works and to the increasing importance of the organization. Those who were present on both occasions could not fail to note that the choristers had gained confidence and that the repetition of the composition showed an enhanced surety.

Such music as the "Requiem" should always be heard under conditions that preclude applause, and the presentation in the cathedral, as a service on All Saint's Day, was eminently fitting. There is a complete incompatibility between the reverential spirit of aspiring music and the restless clamor that breaks out intermittently in the concert hall. Perhaps we will learn in time that all great music, be it religious or secular, deserves the tribute of reception in the silence of complete appreciation.

The sincerity of Brahms never spoke more potently than in this "Requiem," which he called "German" because he wished it to be considered an expression of the folk, a voicing of the people's realization of their spiritual need. For that reason he put aside the liturgy and selected Biblical texts bearing upon death and eternity, consolation for the mourner and victory over the grave.

The sombre accompaniment, scored without violins, for the opening chorus, "Blessed are they that mourn," is a remarkable evocation of grief sustained by faith. In the second chorus, "Behold all flesh is as grass," the measured tread of a funeral cortege is graphically suggested by the use of triple rhythm, a device more effective than any imitative means, and a profound impression is secured by the voices partly in unison with the strange orchestral strains. The joyous certainty of immortality is admirably expressed in the long fugal movement, "The redeemed of the Lord shall return again."

The difficult third number, "Lord, make me to know the measure of my days," was capably treated by the soloist, Edwin C. Steffe, and by the chorus, which followed the conductor faithfully in the sturdy fugue. In striking contrast to this heavy movement on an uninterrupted pedal-bass is the melodious and exultant "How lovely is Thy dwelling place." Infinite tenderness speaks in the fifth number for soprano solo and chorus which Fuller-Maitland attributes to Brahms' sorrow for his mother's death, since it contains the phrase, "As one whom his own mother comforteth."

Rather than in the calm finale, the climax of the whole work is reached in the sixth number for chorus with barytone solo response. "Here on earth have we no continuing place." The resurrection of the dead is depicted in contrapuntal passages of tremendous power, and the brilliant double fugue in C major is a triumphant proclamation.

More About 'Chiselers.'

TOM McCARTHY.

YOU CAN'T beat the ingenuity of the professional hotel chiseler. That is with one possible exception. The staff at the Mayflower Hotel have marveled on occasion at the devices of the "something-for-nothing" people, but their real wonder is reserved for a man from the "great outdoors."

In Washington for a Wild Life convention, this artist of ingenuity performed the near impossible task of secreting nine bird dogs in his hotel suite. While for ingenuity that topped even the professional "chiseler," that doesn't happen often.

"We had one fellow here," Mr. Gumpert, manager of the Hotel Harrington, told me, "who had them all stopped. We caught up with him just as he was having his trunk taken out. In his trunk he'd piled everything from the bedclothes to the curtains. I guess he was furnishing an apartment."

The professional "chiseler," though, is the type Mr. H. P. Somerville, manager of the Willard, talks about, when he tells you of the guest who claimed he'd been injured by broken glass in the bathtub.

"This fellow threw me off guard," Mr. Somerville said, "because he not only claimed injury, but hurried excitedly into the lobby with the piece of glass. However when he wouldn't let the house physician examine him, we decided that we'd better check up.

"We found glass in his room, all right—we found it neatly done up in a little paper bag. He had been going around the country from hotel to hotel, literally living on broken glass. After he'd run up a bill for a day or two, he'd rush into the lobby with a piece of his broken glass.

"Usually to avoid trouble the hotel would cancel his bill, and possibly pay him a little something as settlement.

* * * *

"IT'S A FUNNY thing," one hotel manager told me, "but sometimes even nice people are 'chiselers,' when it comes to hotels. Have you ever heard anybody complain about the pictures you find in hotel rooms? Well, there's a reason for that. If we made them too attractive they wouldn't last a week. People would just pop them into their bags."

Another hotel manager has his own very effective manner of dealing with the normally honest "chiselers."

"A last-minute check is made on the room as the guest is leaving," he said. "If the maid finds towels missing, she phones the room clerk. By the time the party has arrived at the desk the charge for the towels has been listed on the bill as merchandise. Sometimes the result is funny.

"We had one young couple in here last week. When they arrived at the desk the gentleman wanted to know what the extra $10 charge was for. The room clerk was very polite but he said that the charge was for the three towels in the guest's baggage.

"The young man got red, laid the $10 on the desk, and turned to his wife with, 'Darling, I told you you shouldn't have done that!'"

It seems the ladies have somewhat more of a penchant for picking up a souvenir towel.

* * * *

BUT WHILE the hotels do everything possible to check the normally honest chiseler, their big problem is in the man who makes a living at it. He doesn't have anything to do with the modestly priced hotels. He's after big game. His "build-up" begins 24 hours before he reaches the hotel.

"I'll tell you an actual case," the manager of one of Washington's most distinguished hotels said, "but we don't want you to tag the name of the hotel on this story.

"This particular guest arrived at the hotel with a marvelous 'build-up.' For 24 hours in advance of his arrival the phone had been busy with calls for this gentleman whom I'll call Mr. Ipswitch. And messengers arrived with telegrams for the-as-yet unarrived Mr. Ipswitch.

"When he did arrive we were expecting him, and gave him a list of Government officials who wanted to get in touch with him. Of course, he had made all of those calls and delivered those messages himself. But we didn't find out till later.

"The first night at the hotel, he handed the cashier a check for $1,200, and told him he could take his time about getting it sent through. There would be a lapse of three or four days before it could pass through the bank and clearing houses, but he said that was all right.

"Then on the second night at the hotel, he asked for an advance of pocket money—he wanted $400 or $500, until the check was O. K.'ed. The request wasn't unusual. We sometimes cash $5,000 or even $10,000 checks for our patrons. However, everything about this guest was a little too pat.

We investigated his luggage when he was out of his room. We found little in the luggage except check-writing machines. We saved ourselves about $500. And later discovered that Mr. Ipswitch had hit one Baltimore hotel for $300 by the method which failed with us.

* * * *

HOWEVER, if justice eventually overtakes the professional chiseler it sometimes has a way of finding out the amateurs as well.

Mr. Somerville, manager of the Willard, attended a party given by a newly made acquaintance. Toward the end of the evening everyone drifted toward the kitchen to raid the ice-box.

Imagine Mr. Somerville's reaction when he glanced at the china closet and saw a perfectly matched set of his hotel china!

TOMORROW: The third in a series on "Chiselers.

Black Art in Many Forms Presented in Behalf of Hungry Pupils.

Before we arrived at the Belasco we were sure just how we were to begin this review—"a good cause," that's what we were going to say. But we've changed our mind—the proper beginning is "a good show."

For the Citizens' Emergency Committee has done a real service for its potential audiences this week as well as for the hungry tots who will get milk and lunches in school, like other children, because of this phase of Washington's campaign to end the division of its school-age youngsters, at least during school hours, into groups of "the haves" and "the have-nots."

There weren't any programs last night and announcements were missing before some acts, so we don't know if we saw all the featured gentlemen listed above or not, but we saw mystifying stunts of every manner, shape, and form—card tricks, which outdid all card tricks; disappearing ladies, rabbits, pigeons, eggs, handkerchiefs, Hindu tricks, tricks with bowls of goldfish, tricks with boxes, bottles, glasses, and, in spite of sitting so close, we don't know how to do a single one of them!

Black Magic At Its Best.

We particularly enjoyed and highly recommend young Mr. Lou Meyer, from Baltimore, a truly comic gentleman who juggles and amuses and knows thoroughly what he is about. Not at all incidentally, practically everything he is about is entertaining.

Our second favorite and first among the magicians of the show is Mr. A. M. Cowan or Cohen (we really do wish there had been programs), who is an utterly amazing performer with whom we definitely would not care to play poker or anything else played "for keeps." He simply wipes the spots off cards under your nose, and had two young assistants from the audience in the jitters last night, what with having cards disappear out of their hands and appear in pockets whenever Mr. A. W. C. looked in their direction.

Harry Baker, president of the Washington Assembly, No. 23, Society of American Magicians, opened the program with a brief but intriguing act.

Monday's audience was skeptical, which seems a proper attitude for a mystified audience to take, but was soon won to enthusiasm. Leon Brusiloff's orchestra helped matters immensely.

Matinees should prove field days for lucky youngsters who can laugh so that the "unluckies" may eat, and all adults who like problems and black magic should help swell evening audiences. Here is a combination that should be a major attraction for the city—a good show AND a good cause.

Contract Bridge

Use Imagination.

The careful declarer takes note of every card played by the opponents. Most plays convey a fairly clear picture. When the message is not clear, the player with imagination can picture himself as an opponent and, thus, determine the true situation. Note how effective this was in the hand below.

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	3 ◇	Pass
5 ◇	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened the fourth-best heart, and East played the Jack. South had to make an important decision at once. If East had three hearts the contract could not be made, for then the opponents would have no difficulty in cashing two heart tricks whenever South chose to knock out the Ace of spades. South, therefore, had to hope that East had started with only a doubleton heart. In that case South might find it necesary to duck the first trick in the hope that East held the Ace of spades. East would not be able to lead a heart when he took his Ace of spades, and South would be able to discard dummy's last heart on his extra high spade.

But South had to consider also the possibility that West had started with the Ace of spades. East's play of the heart Jack at the first trick indicated that he held either no higher heart or the Queen-Jack. To determine which situation obtained, South put himself in West's place. It was easy to see that West would not have led a low heart from a holding headed by the King and Queen. Therefore East's heart holding had to be Queen-Jack.

Having determined the actual heart situation, South took the first trick with his Ace and drew trumps. Then he knocked out the Ace of spades, and the opponents were helpless. West could not lead the King of hearts without establishing South's ten; and if he led a low heart East would win, but then West would never get the other heart trick.

Miss Ella Larkin's Rites Set Thursday

Funeral services for Ella F. Larkin, 82, aunt of Channing Pollock, author and dramatist, who died here Sunday, will be held Thursday at 11 a. m. at Hysong's funeral home, 1300 N street northwest.

Daughter of John F. Larkin and Violet Larkin, Miss Larkin served as a clerk in the Pension Bureau for 45 years, retiring about 12 years ago.

She is survived by a sister, Mrs. William N. Roach, widow of Senator Roach, of North Dakota; two nephews, Channing Pollock and John Pollock, and three nieces, Mrs. A. G. Keeney, Miss Mary Finley and Mrs. Will Noble.

A Three Days' Cough Is Your Danger Signal

Just a common cough, a chest cold, or a bronchial irritation of today may lead to serious trouble tomorrow. They may be relieved now with Creomulsion, an emulsified Creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medicinal combination designed to aid nature in soothing and healing infected mucous membranes by allaying irritation and inflammation and by aiding in loosening and expelling the germ-laden phlegm.

The Medical Profession has for many years recognized the beneficial effect of Beechwood Creosote in the treatment of coughs, chest colds, and bronchial irritations. A special process was worked out by a chemist, for blending Creosote with other ingredients and now in Creomulsion you get a real dose of genuine Beechwood Creosote which is palatable and can even be taken frequently and continuously by both adults and children.

Creomulsion is one preparation that goes to the very seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel the germ-laden phlegm. When coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles—due to common colds—hang on, get a bottle of Creomulsion from your druggist, use it as directed and if you are not satisfied with the relief obtained, the druggist is authorized to refund every cent of your money. Creomulsion is one word—not two, and it has no hyphen in it. Ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief that you want. Judge Gives Degenerate Life And Advises Him to Kill Self

By the United Press.

New York, Nov. 1.—A squat, swarthy degenerate with small blinking eyes heard a judge sentence him to life imprisonment, add ten years for good measure and finally advise him to commit suicide here today.

Frank Russo, 39-year-old former convict, was convicted October 18 of criminally assaulting a 19-year-old girl after threatening her with a knife. Behind that crime lay a grimy record of arrests for moral offenses, a term in a New Jersey prison for robbery, another stretch in a New York prison on an abduction charge.

"I cannot sentence you to death," Judge Franklin Taylor told him. "The law will not allow me to do that. But I can give you the limit sentence under the law, and I will give it to you.

"I have been advised that you have stated that if you are given a sentence you will take your own life. If you kill yourself, Sing Sing will be sweeter for your demise.

"I hope you are never granted parole. You have caused death to the happiness of many girls and death to their moral welfare.

"Now you know your sentence . . . the rest is up to you, and I am offering no objections to what you do."

Russo was charged with luring Martha Rosenson into his automobile on a pretext of taking her to a movie, driving to a lonely road and threatening to stab her with a knife if she resisted him. The extra 10-year sentence was on the knife charge.

Bartholomews Lose Battle for Custody Of Movie-Star Son

Los Angeles, Nov. 1 (AP).—Cecil L. Bartholomew and his wife, Lillian, lost their fight to regain custody of their famous son, Freddie, today, after the child screen tsar denied he loved them and testified "they're strangers to me."

Counsel for Miss Myllicent Bartholomew, the aunt who had adopted the boy, asked if he were happy with her.

"Yes, sir," Freddie answered. "I've always been with her since I was 3 years of age. She's just the same as my mother to me."

"Do you have any affection for your parents?"

"No," he said, matter of factly. "They're strangers to me."

Judge Robert H. Scott refused to set aside the adoption ordered last April 3.

Sit-Down Audience Refuses to Leave Until Lunt Speaks

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—Broadway witnessed an impasse tonight between a star who refused to make a curtain speech and an audience determined upon a sit-down strike until he did.

The occasion was the New York premiere of the S. N. Behrman version of theancient Greek comedy, "Amphitryon 38," played by Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne.

The first night audience, after 22 curtains, refused to move from their seats. Alfred Lunt, Lynn Fontanne and the remainder of the cast took their bows, but remained silent befor the pleas of cheering celebrities and critics.

Finally, Lunt stepped forward and mumbled indistinct thanks.

Farm Bill Omits Cotton, Wheat, Rice Quotas

Marketing Limits Left Out of Rough Draft for New Aid Legislation.

By the Associated Press.

Marketing quotas proposed for cotton, wheat and rice failed yesterday to win a place in the House Agriculture Committee's rough draft of new general farm legislation.

The committee sent the tentative bill to the printer without provision for marketing quotas, except in the case of tobacco. It left the way open, for the omitted proposals to be placed in the measure later if desired.

Secretary Wallace had reported recently farmers believed marketing quotas might well be placed on the entire cotton crop, and that in the case of corn and wheat quotas might be necessary when surpluses became excessive. He said the quotas might be enforced by Congress under its power to levy taxes or to control interstate commerce.

Payments Included.

As sent to the printer the tentative bill centered around provisions for compulsory regulation of tobacco and for control of wheat, cotton and rice merely by benefit payments to producers co-operating with Federal production programs. Members said provisions for corn had not yet been worked out.

They reported the tobacco control system under consideration would require buyers of tobacco marketed in excess of Federal quotas to pay penalty taxes representing 50 per cent of its value.

Representative Coffee (Democrat), Nebraska, said there was so much controversy among members over marketing quotas for other commodities that it was felt work on the measure would be facilitated, if they were left out of the first print.

Would Continue Act.

The quotas, he added, border on compulsion and some members are opposed strongly to making compulsory provisions the heart of the legislation.

Chairman Jones (Democrat), Texas, told reporters the tentative bill is based upon continuation of the present soil conservation act. He said current marketing agreements may be expanded and import duties used to a greater extent to assist foreign and domestic disposal of surpluses.

"As a supplemental program," Jones said, "the committee has been considering provisions for self-financing methods to secure additional funds to aid in handling the problems of specific commodities. . . . Tariff equalizing taxes will be considered as a means to secure such funds."

He explained the latter were in effect the processing taxes of the old AAA, which the Supreme Court invalidated, but that the new term "more adequately" described their operation.

Odd Mississippi 'Shovel-Fish' Takes Suite in Aquarium Here

Polyodon spathula was dumped into a tank at the Bureau of Fisheries aquarium yesterday after completing a nonstop train ride from his home in the Mississippi River.

Making the trip with the paddle fish, as he is known to his intimates, were some 500 other fishes, including bullheads, muskies, sturgeons, pickerels and white crappies. They were conveyed in a special train equipped with water tanks.

Welcomed upon their arrival by Fred Orsinger, director of the aquarium, the fishes will make their home with the 1,500 specimens already on display.

Four polyodon spathula were brought to Washington, but only one survived the first day. The others will be preserved for the National Museum, Orsinger said.

"Poly," resembling a catfish and having a long spatula-shaped paddle snout, is a close fresh water relative of the shark. He has smooth skin and has a cartilagenous skeleton—no bones.

The polyodon spathula is commonly known as the shovel fish, shovel cat, duckbill cat, spade fish, paddle fish or spoonbill cat. Its large snout, of no obvious use, is regarded as "an expanded sense organ." It depends on semimicroscopic animals and plants for food.

The largest fish of this type caught weighed 163 pounds, was 6 feet 2 inches in length and 4 feet in circumference.

Gerald Smith Maps Fight on Roosevelt

The Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, erstwhile aide of Huey Long, arrived in town yesterday with plans for his "Committee of One Million." Planning to take over the radio time formerly held by the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, Smith said he plans to organize the Nation against dictatorial tactics of the current Administration and "apparent efforts to throw the country into war for the sake of peace."

Scheduled each Sunday afternoon for more than 20 weeks, the radio broadcasts will be financed by volunteer offerings from listeners, he indicated. The weekly talks are expected to cost approximately $96,000.

When his "Committee of One Million" is finally organized, said Smith, it will oppose the concentration of authority in the hands of the President and "attempts to bring us into a European war in the name of peace."

Newest Greenbelt Citizen, 3 Days Old, Will Miss Meeting

The newest citizen of Greenbelt won't attend the town's first meeting tonight. She is 3-day-old Lois Fulmer, and will spend the evening in Garfield Hospital with her mother, Mrs. Klein Fulmer.

The first Greenbelt baby, born since the opening of the project, Lois arrived Sunday. She weighed 7 pounds. Her father, who is superintendent of the town's buildings, insisted on giving her her mother's name.

Lois has two brothers, Thomas, 3, and David, 4. "And there isn't any thing to the rumor that Greenbelt families can't have more than four children," Fulmer announced firmly last night.

The meeting tonight will be attended by Greenbelt's 57 homesteaders, who are getting together to discuss machinery for their election, November 23. On that date they will choose their town manager and members of the council, thus setting up the only town manager government in Maryland. They also will select a mayor, whos principal duty wil be to greet celebrities.

Teachers to Hail Freedom to Wed

Repeal of the famous Section 213, which prohibited employment of married couples in the Government, will be celebrated today at a dinner given by teachers of District public schools in honor of Mrs. Page Kirk, president of the Teachers Alliance, for three years one of the leaders in the fight for repeal of the clause.

Mrs. Kirk will be presented to members by Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendent of schools.

The committee in charge of the reception, which will be held at Wilson Teachers College, from 4 to 6 p. m., includes Mrs. Julia Robinson, vice president of the alliance; Mrs. Ruth Diehl, secretary of the alliance; Mrs. Agnes Lawless, treasurer; Mrs. John R. Beall, Mrs. Marie Page and Mrs. Elizabeth Smart.

Trail-Blazing Trio Welcomed to D. C.

The three Brazilian highway engineers who arrived in Washington last week after blazing a Pan American automobile trail 17,000 miles long, were welcomed officially by the District Commissioners yesterday.

The intrepid drivers, Leonidas Borges de Olideira, Francisco Lopez de la Cruz and Mario Fada, visited the District Building accompanied by Loe S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union.

$7,000,000 Is Paid On Realty Taxes

Approximately $7,000,000 in District real estate taxes was recevied prior to the deadline last Saturday, tax authorities announced yesterday.

An additional 5,000 payment forms, bearing postmarks before the deadline, were received in the mail over the week-end, it was reported. These returns, however, have yet to be tabulated. The penalty for nonpayment is 1 per cent a month.

Licenses issued to business and professional persons thus far this year have totaled $182,000. The licenses sell for $10 each.

Resisting An Unsound Policy.

In its last session Congress passed a bill over President Roosevelt's veto providing for an extension of emergency low interest rates on Federal Land Bank loans. The President pointed out in his veto message that, if farmer borrowers were singled out for preferential treatment, it would be extremely difficult to resist demands for similar concessions on behalf of borrowers from other Federal agencies.

The Home Owners Loan Corporation has special reason to fear the extension of this weak policy followed in dealing with the farmers. In fact, a number of bills introduced into Congress last session call for sharp reductions in HOLC interest rates and extension of amortization periods.

Evidently anticipating renewal of the campaign to secure concessions for homeowner borrowers, the HOLC recently released a statement defending its foreclosure policy. It asserts that the proposed interest reductions are unnecessary from the borrowers' viewpoint and would be costly to the Government. In substantiation of these claims it is pointed out that current collections average 97 per cent of current monthly accruals, while many borrowers are catching up on their delinquencies.

Every effort is made, it is said, to effect practicable adjustments of debt or arrange for disposal of property before instituting foreclosure proceedings. Foreclosures have been resorted to chiefly when borrowers have failed to meet interest and amortization payments for twenty months and have not paid taxes for two or three years. That would appear to be an adequate answer to charges that the HOLC has been harsh and unreasonable in dealing with delinquent borrowers.

Of course, mistakes have been made at times, but not every case of hardship can be chalked up against the HOLC. The Government did not undertake to wipe out the indebtedness of homeowners when it agreed to aid them. Nor did it promise to carry homeowners clearly incapable of discharging their obligations after their debts had been scaled and they had been tided over the emergency. That being the case, some foreclosures are inevitable.

The HOLC is convinced from its experience that few, if any, future foreclosures would be averted by reduced interest rates and longer amortization periods. On the other hand, such changes would result in serious reductions in the income of the HOLC itself. The difference between the cost of money to the HOLC and the rates charged to borrowers is not a clear profit. Not only must operating expenses be covered but a reserve to meet losses has to be built up. Should that be neglected, the Treasury—which means the taxpayers—would ultimately have to cover HOLC deficits.

Apart from all these compelling reasons against slashing interest rates, the effect upon private lenders in the home mortgage field has to be considered. The lower rate of interest on farm mortgages has resulted already in withdrawal of large investors from this field. Similar consequences would probably follow reduction of interest rates by the HOLC, with resultant injury to the home mortgage market and lower reduction of returns to millions of small investors in mortgage lending institutions.

A Pre-Airplane Sky Pilot.

News that the Rev. Charles W. Gordon is dead in Winnipeg probably means little to most Americans. But when it is recalled that he was the author of "The Sky Pilot," many older memories will be jogged. That novel, written under the pen name of "Ralph Connor," sold more than a million copies around the turn of the century.

"The Sky Pilot" was based largely on Dr. Gordon's own experiences as a missionary among Rocky Mountain miners and lumbermen during the hard-boiled frontier days of the West. His career later led him to high positions in Canadian church life. During the war, too, he served as chaplain for the Cameron Highlanders. This gave him the background for a sequel to his best seller, "The Sky Pilot in No Man's Land." But its comparatively limited sale made it clear that this type of romance had become outdated.

Since the war, adventure stories—particularly juvenile adventure—have acquired a much more sophisticated technique. Bare knuckles are no longer acceptable. Perhaps Jules Verne really set the new style; in any case, adventure today demands what the trade knows as "technics." That is to say, juvenile books must rotate around airplanes, television, machine guns and even death rays.

This would be fair enough if it weren't for the fact that such mechanisms come to dominate a book. And, naturally, they lack personality. What will the rising generation have to remember as fondly and intimately as, for example, the pranks and chatter of the fun-loving Rovers?

International Poker.

The departure of Italy's Ambassador at Paris on "indefinite leave of absence" appears, at first glance, to be rather childish business. Certainly it is difficult to believe that the French government will be intimidated by this move into giving formal recognition to the Italian conquest of Ethiopia. Ostensibly, the French refusal to do so is responsible for Signor Cerruti's recall.

Like much else in the European merry-go-round this action is one which cannot be considered as an isolated event. Mussolini now has his hard-won dominance in the Mediterranean and his extremely important stake in Spain to defend. Recognition of his control over Ethiopia can wait. But it is also a counter which he can push forward as part of the general game of bluff.

Up to now, Mussolini's Mediterranean and Spanish ambitions have met with relatively feeble resistance. Aside from the Nyon anti-piracy agreement, the democratic powers have steadily given way to Italian pressure. Mussolini even succeeded in getting Great Britain and France to scrap their plan for a three-power conference on the volunteer withdrawal problem and to submit that question to the discredited London committee, where it is still snagged.

It remains doubtful whether Great Britain is any more willing now than hitherto to take strong measures to clear up the crisis arising out of the Spanish civil war. London prefers to pursue Fabian tactics hoping that a bad situation may automatically improve. And this tendency has strengthened since the onset of the Sino-Japanese conflict.

There the Japanese are displaying a reckless indifference to British rights and British protests over their violation. Tokyo acts on the assumption, and it seems to be justified, that Great Britain will and can do nothing because of the Mediterranean crisis. And it may well be that Germany and Italy seek to keep Great Britain inactive in Europe by increasing her difficulties in the Far East. They have done so by giving diplomatic aid and encouragement to Japan. The Fascist powers know how to work together.

French interests in the Far East happen, however, to be under less direct attack than those of Britain. The French government's preoccupation with European affairs is, therefore, greater than that of its neighbor and ally. Moreover it is in a position to take a more vigorous stand in that area. And the signs are multiplying that it is prepared to do just that.

Recent German press attacks on Czechoslovakia have resulted in a very clear warning by Foreign Minister Delbos that any attack on this central Europe democracy will meet with French resistance. And in the more tangled Spanish issue French tempers are rising. There is more than a possibility that the border may be opened to arms shipments in the interests of the loyalists.

This Mussolini no doubt recognizes. It is not enough to multiply British difficulties by backing Japanese aggression in the Far East, and by such threats as are embodied in the dispatch of larger reinforcements to Libya. The campaign of coercion must also include France.

So the recall of the Italian Ambassador from Paris may be regarded as simply a card played by Il Duce in the great diplomatic poker game which has the wide world as its table. It is a game which the dictators can play with much more competence than the democracies, hampered as the latter are by parliaments and a vocal public opinion. But it is also a dangerous game in which, sooner or later, a reckless bid is likely to be called.

Science And The Five Stars.

In May, 1934, public interest was focused on Callander, Canada, because "identical" quints were born to a farmer and his wife. Now three years and five months later these five daughters of Dionne again make the headlines because science has discovered their dissimilarities.

At first even their mother and doctor couldn't tell one from the other without consulting the quints' identifying tags. But at last it is possible to discern that Yvonne is the most "socially mature;" that Marie is the least so; that Cecile and Annette vie for second place and Emilie, the eternal feminine, is constantly changing around in this ranking.

An admiring and constant world audience has watched these children grow from mere blanket-wrapped bundles to celebrities with five-figure salaries. Dolls have been made in their image; breakfast food has been sold in their name, and Canada's tourist trade has increased visibly since their birth. It means little to the layman when science discloses that in the "personal-serial behavior the children approach the norm most closely." But let the Dionnes appear in new Easter outfits or engage in hair-pulling for the benefit of candid cameramen and a chorus of ohs and ahs girdles the globe.

As to the problem of punishment, Dr. Dafoe is a strong believer in the isolationist policy. He indulges in nothing stronger than separating the offender from her sisters. It may be, of course, that the little physician is afraid to attempt to identify the child in need of punishment. But it seems more likely that the doctor, unlike Death, is a respecter of persons. For, after all, who ever heard of spanking a movie star?

State Centralization.

New York's current move to amend its constitution brings to attention important changes which are taking place in the structure of State governments. The tendency to concentrate power in Washington has obscured the centralization developing in virtually all State capitals since the advent of the depression. But that does not minimize the significance of the trend.

Today the people of New York will elect 168 delegates to meet in convention for the purpose of revising the State constitution. It would be idle to speculate on the changes which may be made. The mere fact that the voters favor an analysis of the State's basic law is indicative of the evolution that is taking place.

Most of the States began extending their control over municipal functions when it became evident that many cities could not meet the social responsibilities arising out of the depression. American cities rely almost entirely upon property taxes for their revenue. As a result, they were left with very inadequate funds during the depression years. The States were called upon to aid local government in providing relief, schools, highways, police protection and other services. And to insure prudent spending of these funds State governments also extended their supervision over many local functions.

Every State now aids its public schools. Together they contributed 23.4 per cent of all public school funds in 1934, compared with 16.5 per cent in 1920. It is not surprising, then, that approximately 20 States have enacted laws during the last seven years imposing stringent control over school budgets, accounts, audits and expenditures.

Highway construction and maintenance has become more and more a State function. That is entirely reasonable. Most roads today are part of State or national highway systems. To leave the planning and construction of these roads in the hands of cities and counties would be costly as well as inefficient. The expansion of State highway funds by means of gasoline taxes has made this incursion upon the field of local government inevitable.

Every State has assumed some degree of control over the administration of relief and other public welfare activities during the last seven years. Here again necessity was the compelling motive. When the resources of some communities were exhausted it was essential to tap broader sources of revenue.

In the case of law enforcement agencies, the inefficiency of local police in handling modern crime problems has been a strong incentive to centralization. Since 1930, police systems have been established in 24 States. All but five of the 48 States now have centralized law enforcement of some sort. And in most cases these new agencies supplement rather than replace the local police forces.

On the whole this tendency reflects the course of progress. Small political units are obviously unable to cope with the modern demands of education, social security, law enforcement, etc. If government is to be efficient as well as democratic the concentration of more responsibility in the State capitals is a logical development. The same tendency ought to result in a consolidation of many county governments and complete elimination of various loosely knit district agencies.

The intelligent response of the States to these new responsibilities, however, is clearly an argument against as much as for the movement toward greater concentration of power in the Federal Government.

The Fireman's Lot.

You may take it from the records of the Easton (Md.) Fire Department that the course of progress does not automatically produce more leisure.

Because the firemen there alertly inspected houses for fire hazards, and removed them, fires have decreased in numbers. As a consequence, the men have had time to free mired bulls, take cats from the tops of telephone poles, capture mischievous monkeys, give aid to homeless dogs and (since they have all had their blood tested and types noted) answer calls to the hospitals for blood transfusions.

Though the catalogue of service rendered may seem to indicate that this is an unusual fire company one suspects that it isn't; that it is really typical of all fire companies. For one need not live in Easton to realize that firemen are forever giving first aid to accident victims; administering oxygen; rescuing children from impossible places. As for the bizarre, the unusual, consider the case of the Washington firemen called upon to extricate the stout lady who got wedged between the wall and the bathtub.

Once upon a time a fireman had a little leisure; but nowadays (judging from the public prints) he never has a moment to improve his game, be it bridge, euchre, seven-up or checkers.

An anthropologist says that in 100 years there will be no blondes left in this country. No doubt. Even now, it's mighty hard to leave one.

Stylists decree that skirts shall be much shorter this winter; and long-range weather forecasters are predicting an unusually severe winter. It is feared that the number of men who will freeze to death on windy street corners this winter will be appalling.

'Street Walkers' Here.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since there were two articles on the opposite editorial page of The Post of October 31 regarding sex crimes and the like, I think it is a good time to bring to the public eye another item right up that alley.

The item to which I refer is the "street walkers" of the City of Washington, the Nation's Capital. This practice is bad enough in any city, but the heights to which it has soared in this city are atrocious. Let's not evade the issue by saying, "Well, look at New Orleans, or some other city—it's worse there."

Either some members of the police force are sadly misinformed, or they are admitting inefficiency to cope with the situation, for I have heard some of them say that they are doing all they can. Bah!

Papers all over the country have recently taken up a crusade against social diseases. One sure way of making headway is to eliminate these public menaces. Fining is not enough—many of them can afford a fine, and will be right back at "work" the following night. Imprisonment is the only solution.

For An American 'Sweep.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your letter column Mr. Horton asks: "Why not an American sweepstakes?"

But Jim Farley shouts an emphatic "No!" to any lottery suggestions. He says it's a gamble, hence should not be permitted because it offers no assured return on the investment!

There seems to be a very subtle difference in that angle that we folks of the uninitiated can't seem to appreciate.

If you buy a "Sweeps" ticket for $2.50 and know when you buy it that your chances are mighty slim of getting anything at all—you're a bold bad gambler, and should be in jail. If you buy a block of stock, or some foreign government bonds, or some boom real estate, and hope to clean up on a rising market that suddenly goes into reverse, or a revolutionary coup d'etat upsets things and repudiates the bonds, or the boom goes bust and you lose your shirt in the process—that is legal, legitimate and most righteous, and you are just unfortunate, but not a gambler because the return was assured!

It doesn't make sense!

So I, too, say let's have our own "Sweeps" and keep our money in America where it belongs, to finance some much needed hospitals or other worthy enterprise.

Germans In Africa.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mussolini in his latest speech promised the Germans support in reconquering their colonial empire, so that the "African Sun" can shine again on the German flag. The Nazis are eminently fitted, according to Hitler, to bring the culture and the blessings of their civilization to the unfortunate black man, who by the official Nazi standard is classified together with the Jews and gypsies as being "sub-human."

Judged by pre-war colonial efforts the natives of Africa may very well pray to be spared. The German colonial empire of pre-war days boasted among others of the cultural accomplishments of Dr. Carl Peters, commonly known as "Hang-Peters." His method of colonizing the natives consisted of hanging them en masse when they proved recalcitrant. In Southwest Africa in 1905 the tribe of the Hereros was driven with wives and children into the waterless African desert and annihilated by the "African Sun"—the same sun which Hitler and Mussolini wish to shine again on African natives.

Dr. Smith's Dismissal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The sudden eviction of Dr. Carrie Smith from the Girls Training School was a most unusual procedure of dismissal. The eviction of a public servant from such an important position, without a hearing, does not appeal to any citizen as fair play or as ethical.

If the reforms desired by the Commissioners were not carried out according to their satisfaction the change of personnel was justifiable, but the manner in which it was done was not justifiable. The public asks why was the eviction, so precipitate, made without a hearing being given as to the charges against Dr. Smith?

"Gross mismanagement" carries an implication of which the Commissioners should have been aware at a much earlier period of her administration. The Commissioners in having employed such a manner of dismissal have not added to the morale of an institution of such import as the Girls Training School.

Laurels To A Citizen.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Athletic games and wars bring many heroes, but never do we think of peacetime heroes or non-athletic heroes within our society. With a tolling crime wave confronting every hamlet, town and city within our America, it behooves every citizen who counts himself or herself a true American to also become a peacetime hero and co-operate with our law-enforcement authorities.

How easy it is to call the local police when anything of a serious or strange nature occurs within our respective communities.

It is equally as easy to notify the police if unauthorized persons possess firearms and look suspicious, because surely such persons might be and are dangerous to society. Any such person might kill, rob or mutilate another. Who knows what ulterior motives are linked with that illegally possessed pistol?

A dutiful and ordinary citizen, with the avocation of a tailor, who, like his brother American up in Bangor, Me., notified the local police about the Brady gang, is also to be highly commended as a peacetime hero. He also notified the Metropolitan Police about the self-possessed Beau Brummell, who walked into his shop and calmly deposited a revolver on a table after removing his suit to have it pressed.

In one case a gang of killers was wiped out, and in the local case the police arrested a bandit, a robber and no doubt a killer due to the thoughtfulness of this true American citizen.

Laurels to the tailor—a true American citizen! Would that the District of Columbia had many more such valuable citizens who could co-operate with our police department and help decrease the city's violent wave of crime. CLIFFORD O. SMITH.

'Haves' And 'Have-Nots.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Of all the delusions which afflict certain political minds one of the strangest is the idea that poverty can be abolished by the redistribution of wealth—compelling the "haves" to "shell out" to the "have-nots."

When examined in the light of reason, the aforesaid theory contains scarcely an atom of merit. As a matter of actual fact, many of today's "haves" will be in the "have-not" group tomorrow, for the simple reason that literally armies of people are utterly devoid of "money-sense" and are apparently born with wasteful, dissipated tendencies. Unfortunately, ideas of caution and conservatism cannot be transferred from balanced minds to those lacking in stability. As yet, mental surgery has not been developed!

On the other hand, some of the greatest characters in history were originally "have-nots" and gained the heights, not by seeking succor from the "haves," but through ambition, struggle and toil. One of the most outstanding "have-nots" in American history was Abraham Lincoln. And Grover Cleveland worked from the bottom to the very top rung of the ladder. Not lacking in sympathy for the "underdog," this strong leader nevertheless realized the problem of lack could not be solved by "milking" the United States Treasury.

Who remembers the admonition: "The people should support the Government, not the Government the people?"

Washington And Baltimore.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems as if our new chairman of the District of Columbia Committee in the House (The Hon. Vincent L. Palmisano of Baltimore) likes to compare Washington with Baltimore.

He forgets that Washington is the most expensive city in the country in which to live (according to reports issued by the Bureau of Labor Statistics) whereas Baltimore is one of the cheapest. Washington does not have the large factory-worker population that Baltimore has. Rents and food are much higher in Washington, and, of course, this is the Capital City and must be kept in better general condition.

If Mr. Palmisano would lower the cost of living in Washington, then he should proceed seriously to consider lowering the costs of government.

Protest From A Spiritualist Pastor.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to protest against the action of the authorities in the District of Columbia, in arresting one of the regularly ordained ministers of the religion of spiritualism, on the charge of telling fortunes without paying the $250 license.

In protesting against this intolerant action, I am not only speaking for the members of my church, but I speak for the members of all the Spiritualist churches in the District of Columbia and, what is more, for the vast number of Spiritualists throughout the country.

We Spiritualists, at a public hearing before members of Congress some years ago, influenced them to add an amendment to the fortune-telling law, which entirely freed our regularly ordained ministers and their appointed representatives from its action. They were, of course, influenced also by the fact that the Constitution of the United States declares:

"Congress shall make no law respecting an established religion or prohibiting free exercise thereof."

This law enacted by Congress has been respected and upheld by the authorities here until this recent arrest.

The point is that the expression of prophecy is a vital part of the manifestations and revelations of the religion of Spiritualism and it would be impossible to curtail or remove it without dooming the movement to destruction. This fact is well known by the enemies of Spiritualism who seek to undermine it.

The work of our mediums in giving private readings, in which they exercise the gift of prophecy and that of the discerning of spirits, is as vital a part of our religion as that of the religious exercises of the representatives of any other religion for which money is paid directly or indirectly.

No one is more eager than the Spiritualists themselves to expose and drive out the fakes, who use the religion of Spiritualism as a cloak to cover their fraudulent practices, but we don't want to see the innocent suffer with the guilty. We feel that the authorities should investigate the standing and credentials of a representative of our religion before making an arrest.

We, as citizens of the District of Columbia and as taxpayers have our rights, even if we are not allowed to vote. We are not living in Russia, neither are we existing in Germany or Italy. We happen to be residing in a free country, under a Constitution which guarantees our rights, and false arrest is a grave injustice.

With religious intolerance so rampant throughout Europe today, it is unfortunate to see this most despicable evil rear its scaly head and breathe forth its poisonous breath here in the Capital City.

The Post Impressionist

The House Is Haunted.

I SEE by the Sunday papers that the good City of Washington tucked up her skirts on All Hallows' Eve and had a high old time. I read that playful varmints flooded whole sections by unleashing fire plugs, that they swiped auto trailers, chased raccoons, sent newsmen wild with fake tips on murder and rapine, completely tuckered out the Fire Department and shattered the larynxes of three police radio announcers.

I wouldn't know anything about all this. I spent the night in a haunted house.

The whole trouble is that Mrs. Graham, The Post's Glen Echo correspondent, doesn't have the proper respect for ha'nts. She lives right next to this one, out near the roller coaster somewhere, and I guess she's got her reasons for wishing that nobody had ever seen queer lights in an attic window. Gangs of people have been trampling her mother's flower beds ever since the first story about the lights. The payoff came the other day when a lot of power company people had a picnic practically on her front porch and insisted on investigating the haunted house's wiring.

So here were Jean and Donovan and I driving up to Mrs. Graham's house, all ready for anything and the first thing she said was:

"Don't believe the stories about two people being murdered there. There never was any murder. It was a retired British army officer who died of tuberculosis and they wouldn't bury him in Arlington National Cemetery."

We didn't have a flashlight so Mrs. Graham got one and led us down a hill through some bushes to a little creek. On the other side of the creek, sort of glowing out in the dark, was the house. Things began looking pretty good again, especially when Jean stumbled over something which turned out to be a papier-mache black cat—and a pretty sinister papier-mache black cat it was.

We walked around the place—a sort of summer bungalow set down in a hole. We found an open window and I pushed Donovan in. He made a plump when he hit inside and then there wasn't any more noise. I was glad I had 50 pounds on him and an excuse not to be the pushed.

But pretty soon Donovan untangled himself from the old bathtub he'd landed in and opened the front door. The place was awful empty and not exactly like a haunted house ought to be. It wasn't old enough and there weren't any spider webs. I looked in all the closets and found six old beer bottles and a can of lye. Mrs. Graham showed me the room the man had died in. There were some funny papers on the floor.

Donovan and I had an argument about who was going up the trap door into the attic. I won again because of my 50 extra pounds, but a minute later I was sorry. Jean set off a flash bulb just as I almost had him up, and we both landed on the remains of a prickly wicker chair. Donovan was on top. We'd forgotten she had a camera and thought we were goners.

Presently Donovan made the grade, taking the flashlight with him, and we could hear him wandering around among the rafters. After about ten minutes—with us shivering in the dark—he stuck his head through the hole in the ceiling and said he'd found five more beer bottles and an old Congressional Record, but nary a ha'nt, not even a wee Glen Echo banshee.

Well, there wasn't much to do except sit in the dark and wish for some other fools to come along. A mysterious glow down toward the river was interesting for a while until we traced it to a refraction from my parking lights. Then again I let out a small yelp when I saw a couple of legs dangling from the ceiling. They were Donovan's. When Jean and Mrs. Graham started swapping beauty hints, I got out of there, leaving Donovan to his doom.

I headed up the other side of the hill, thinking I'd talk to a Mrs. Kessler who has seen the lights most. But it was about midnight by that time and her house was dark. I sat down in her back yard and started to moan under my breath, the idea being that maybe I could start another legend and get dubbed "The Phantom Moaner." Everything was quiet as an abandoned coal mine and I was moaning fit to kill when, sudden like, I thought of what might happen had Mrs. Kessler the possession of a shootin' iron.

I got out of there so fast I fell into a small, but very foul morass. I sat there a long time in the mud and finally took a drink and pretended I had a ghost with me taking one too so I wouldn't be considered heading toward a toper grave in potter's field.

Back at the house Jean was cold. Mrs. Graham was sleepy and Donovan was beefing about me taking the bottle and sitting in morasses with it. So we all stumbled up the hill and went home.

Jean and Donovan and I don't think either Mrs. Graham or the ha'nt had a very good time while we were there, but we want to tell them it was just about the most enjoyable Halloween we ever spent. No horns, no ringing telephones, no fire engines, no nothing, but a big gob of peace. I didn't even get any soap scratches on my automobile.

Fair Enough

George Spelvin.

FROM TIME TO TIME these living, human documents have tried to record the mixed ruminations, the prejudices and the bafflement of the Average American, using for his name George Spelvin. Several correspondents, including a drama critic who was covering one of the haymow theaters of the summer circuits in New Hampshire, have been good enough to report that they have discovered Mr. Spelvin himself at work in the drama in various places and to suggest that perhaps it was unwise to attribute such thoughts to an actual person who might hold decided views to the contrary.

Mr. Spelvin has played more roles than any other actor that ever lived, and though he has usually performed acceptably and sometimes with distinction he is the only ham of his grade and ability who has never been invited to fall in with the rest of the cast and take his bends at the fall of the curtain. His passing, soon to occur, will be unnoticed even by his colleagues of the stage and nobody will realize that he has gone until, perhaps years later, someone remarks, "I wonder whatever became of George Spelvin." Sentimentalists though they are, the men and women who paint their faces, dress up in fancy clothes and give recitations and sing and dance will send not so much as a card to his kin or a sprig to his bier.

• • • •

GEORGE SPELVIN made his debut in a minor part in "Brewster's Millions," and there once was a time when he was appearing in five Broadway productions at once.

John Golden, the producer of many plays and currently of "Susan and God," with Gertrude Lawrence, which, in return for his assistance, I dare hope is a smash hit, goes back to the beginning on George.

It was Eddie Abeles who invented Mr. Spelvin, Mr. Golden informs me out of a memory of the theater as long as an Englishman's shirt and as cluttered as a rat's nest with odd bits of reminiscent information. Spelvin, says Mr. Golden, was an imaginary character, to whom Eddie Abeles attributed all blame for everything that went wrong and all gossip and rumor. He was Mr. Abeles' personal John Doe, and, scorning the popularly accepted form of "I hear" or "they tell me," Mr. Abeles would attribute the most scurrilous hearsay to George Spelvin.

In "Brewster's Millions" there was an actor cast for two parts who naturally wanted to use his own name for the better one, and it was Abeles, the star, who, when they came to make up the program, proposed the name of his confidential wraith for the minor role. Mr. Golden doesn't recall the name of the mimic who first used this hardy alias, but he does recollect that Jack Devereaux, the juvenile, after ten weeks of rehearsal, returned an answer to Fred Thompson, the producer, which was of some weight when, years afterward, the Actors' Equity placed a limitation on the period of rehearsal without pay.

"You read that part like an old man," said Thompson. "I thought you were a juvenile," to which Devereaux replied, "I was when we started rehearsals."

• • • •

IN LATER YEARS Mr. Golden, out of slightly superstitious respect for the success of "Brewster's Millions," made a point of using George Spelvin's name on the programs of "No. 6," "Washington Square," "Turn to the Right," "Lightnin'," "Three Wise Fools," "Seventh Heaven" and "The First Year" for the secondary role of the actor who doubled. And it is his belief that if any artist has a special claim to the name it would be Mr. Jimmy Lane, who also was George Spelvin in a succession of Golden plays over several years. Other producers adopted Spelvin, however, and he often appeared simultaneously not only in several Broadway houses but in theaters on the road, hundreds of miles apart.

George Spelvin's career is waning now, undone by his own versatility and accumulating fame. The customers are getting onto him and, of all things, resent him as a deceiver in a world of make-believe.

One-Way Gate

Puerto Rico Lays Misery To Its Wealth; Social Aspects Of Sugar Measured Against New Deal 'Yardstick.'

By J. M. Clark,
A Staff Correspondent.

San Juan, P. R.

"PUERTO RICO" may be translated as "Gateway of Riches." It's a one-way gate. The island which has produced more than a few fortunes is itself poverty-ridden. Experienced travelers say it is no more miserable than other American countries and that it is far better than the Orient. But this is smal lsolace to Americans who must recognize Puerto Rico as a part of their own country.

American interest in the island is by no means entirely sentimental. Next to Canada, Puerto Rico is this country's best customer in the Western Hemisphere; among world customers, it ranks seventh. Last year, for example, the island bought $86,000,000 worth of American goods. For a country smaller than Rhode Island, this seems surprising. The explanation lies in the fact that the island sells most of what it produces and, accordingly, must buy a large part of what it consumes. Being within the American tariff system, it sells almost exclusively to the United States and naturally buys in the same market.

Puerto Rico sells sugar. It also sells tobacco, fruits, coffee and needlework labor. But tobacco, fruit and coffee exports account for less than 12 per cent of the total. The needlework business alone accounts for 18.7 per cent. Cloth cut to pattern is shipped to Puerto Rico from New York. Women take home bundles and stitch it into handkerchiefs and women's wear for the equivalent of pay ranging from 1 to 4 cents an hour. This sweating may soon be minimized if the courts sustain a minimum wage law currently under appeal and if the insular Department of Labor can enforce it.

It may be pointed out here that Puerto Rico was excluded from all provisions of the Federal social security act though other American territories were included at least in some particulars.

Raw Sugar Represents 60% Of Island's Exports.

TO RETURN to sugar: Sugar represents 60 per cent of Puerto Rico's exports. The significance can best be demonstrated by further statistics. Sugar accounts for 40 per cent of the island's cultivated acreage. It is estimated to represent 30 per cent of the island's total wealth. It pays 28 per cent of the general taxes, 43 per cent of the income tax and 35 per cent of the property tax.

Suger employs directly a quarter of Puerto Rico's workers. It is also responsible for much of the island's good communications, light and power, railway, banking and shipping facilities. It is all this, and yet sugar is roundly damned in Puerto Rico. Sugar, the island's best wealth, is blamed for the island's poverty.

Before reciting the arguments of those who inveigh against sugar—which includes most of the independence-minded Liberal Party, the largest numerically on the island—it should be noted that few Puerto Ricans object to the fact that it is a cash crop. Many argue for broader diversification, but all seem agreed that the island is best fitted for commercial rather than consumption, agriculture. Indeed, it has been competently estimated that if all production of cash crops were discontinued except that needed for local consumption and the land devoted to food growing, the amount produced would be sufficient to feed only half the present population.

No, the arguments heard against sugar begin with the unquestioned fact that most of the business is absentee-owned. There are a few Puerto Rican sugar companies and a few Spanish, but the sugar business as a whole is dominated by three principal American corporations. This means, naturally, that most of the profits in sugar go out of the island. This would be agreeable to Puerto Rico (so the argument runs) if the profits were fairly earned. But it is believed that, because the profit-takers live in far off New York and other places, they have little conscience about how the money is made. It is made, say the disgruntled Puerto Ricans, as follows:

By paying average wages of $3.75 a week to adult males (Department of Labor figures); by housing employes in shacks that would disgrace a dog (this observer says amen); by maintaining company stores and charging company prices; by banding together to keep out new industries (such as one which offered to pay for cane residue otherwise burned as trash) for fear that better living and working conditions might be introduced; by forbidding, for the same reason, employes to plant a single bean on company property to eke out their meager existence; by short-weighting cane and falsifying chemical analyses by which payments are regulated; by forcing loans (in collusion with the big New York banks) on private farmers at usurious rates; by ultimately forcing those farmers to sell their property and take salaried positions which are soon made intolerable for them; by influencing municipal politics in the interests of easy tax assessments; and so forth.

American Corporations Have Paid Steady Profits.

HOW MANY of the allegations are true, it is difficult for a visitor to determine. It is certain, however, that the American sugar corporations have taken much money out of Puerto Rico. Dividends were paid steadily throughout the depression except in the case of one company following two hurricane years. It seems evident, too, from all accounts that since the coming of the sugar corporations Puerto Rico's general well-being has steadily declined. Whereas there were 100,000 self-supporting and reasonably well-endowed farmers at the time of the Spanish-American War, today with the population doubled there are only half as many.

To these points the sugar companies reply that cane can be grown today only on a large scale and that their enterprise plus the hurricane risks justify the profits earned. They are sorry, they say, if wages are low and life for the farmer is hard, but better that than no employment at all. Until last year there was no way of checking the validity of these arguments. Now, perhaps, the answer is being worked out at the Central Lafayette.

The Central Lafayette is a cooperative sugar plant. It was purchased in 1936 by the Puerto Rico Reconstruction Administration, a unit of the New Deal's relief machinery administered until recently by Dr. Ernest H. Gruening, of the Interior Department's division of territories and island possessions. The PRRA (pronounced "prah") appointed a manager and took a 30-year mortgage on the $4,265,000 property from two cooperatives formed from among farmers of the neighborhood and field workers. The latter were provided with new houses and subsistence plots.

The Lafayette experiment is only one phase of the PRRA's $42,000,000 (to date) program. Tobacco, coffee and needlework co-operatives have likewise been formed. It has also undertaken rural electrification, soil erosion, reforestation and housing programs. The last seems doomed to at least financial failure, for the City of San Juan made a similar experiment a number of years ago.

In addition to the PRRA the island has a Hurricane Relief Commission, a Farm Credit Agency and Federal Land Bank, CCC camps and HOLC and PWA offices. All combine to represent the first integrated and conscientious effort on the part of Washington to alleviate the plight of Puerto Rico.

Island Seeks To Enforce 500-Acre Land Restriction.

NOT THAT the island has not or is not trying to help itself. Today, for the first time since the law was enacted in 1917 the insular attorney general is attempting to enforce a 500-acre restriction on corporate land holdings. If successful in breaking the devices by which the sugar corporations have slipped around this law, it is common opinion that he will have started Puerto Rico toward a new and—from the poor man's view—perhaps, richer economy.

In addition, Gov. Winship has dedicated himself generously toward the discovery of new sources of income for the island. At the moment he is endeavoring to promote Puerto Rico as a tourist center.

Even if the island could compete successfully with Miami, Jamaica and Bermuda as a winter resort, it is doubtful whether tourism would benefit much more than the City of San Juan. And it is the whole island of 1,800,000 souls with 45,000 more arriving annually that must be helped if a serious social tempest is not to break in Uncle Sam's lap in the Caribbean. The political barometer has already taken slight but ominous dips.

Baiting Britain

Object Of Japan's Wrath.

AT THE MOMENT, the most vulnerable part of the British Empire is a rock rising out of the China Sea—Hong Kong.

It is no secret that Great Britain is today in no position adequately to defend Hong Kong. As far back as the Washington conference of 1921-22 the British realized the insuperable difficulties of defending that important crown colony. The open water separating the island from the British leased territory of Kowloon offers inadequate shelter to a large fleet. And the region is often the prey of violent typhoons.

No wonder, then, that Great Britain agreed at the conference to build no new fortifications on Hong Kong. The strategic problem of defending that very valuable transshipment point for goods destined for and emanating from South China was worked out in quite another way. By building a great naval base at Singapore, the British hoped to be in a position to come to the aid of any part of the British Empire in the Pacific, eastern and southeastern Asia, including Hong Kong, menaced from without.

SINCE THEN the Singapore base has been completed. It is one of the world's wonders. But so far as protecting Hong Kong today it might just as well not have been built. For the great fleet of British warships that, according to plan, was to be rushed to Singapore in times of tension in Asia and from Singapore to the actual danger zone, is far away. Most of the ships are in the Mediterranean where Great Britain faces a situation no less difficult and dangerous and much closer to the chalk cliffs of Dover than she faces in the Far East.

That being the case it is easy to understand why Great Britain is unwilling to assume any position of leadership in opposing Japan's treaty-smashing course. Willing, as it has been, to join the other League powers in voting condemnation of Japan's undeclared war on China, ready to participate in the Brussels conference of Nine Power Treaty signatories, she would prefer to have the United States take the lead. And there are sound reasons why the United States should do precisely that. But at any rate the fact is that in declaring Britain's willingness to co-operate "on an equal basis" with the other powers, particularly the United States, Anthony Eden was outlining the present limit of British action.

IT IS A CURIOUS circumstance in this connection that the relative moderation of this British stand finds no echo in Japan. One would certainly imagine that, in view of the fact that the United States joined in condemning Japan and that it agreed to participate in the Brussels parley, it would be this country that would be the particular object of Japanese objurgations.

Nothing of the sort has happened. The Japanese, outwardly at least, appear to view American policy more in sorrow than in anger. It is against Britain that their rage is directed. An important political body in Japan has gone so far as to urge the government to break diplomatic relations with the United Kingdom, not so many years ago Japan's great and good ally.

The fact that the American fleet is concentrated in the Pacific while the British fleet is immobilized in the Mediterranean may have something to do with the direction of Japanese fury. But it doesn't explain everything. It does not explain why, for instance, the Japanese have not only repeatedly rebuffed perfectly legitimate British protests, such as that over the shooting of the British Ambassador to China, but have practically gone out of their way to twist the lion's tail.

• • • •

A POSSIBLE explanation may be that Japan is deliberately courting a break with Great Britain undeterred by the dangerous possibilities arising out of such a development.

After all, even if strategically the British position in Eastern Asia happens to be weak at the moment, there is no certainty that it will remain weak very long. And, at any rate, the financial and economic weapon which Great Britain could employ against Japan is one which could hardly add to Tokyo's peace of mind.

Yet the fact is also apparent that the principal point of entry for arms, munitions and other essentials needed by the Nanking government to continue its resistance is Hong Kong. Were that entry cut off, China, many Japanese now believe, would quickly submit to the invader.

This does not mean that the Japanese are prepared to complicate their military and naval situation by a direct attack on Hong Kong and Wowloon. But it may nonetheless mean that the Japanese are seeking to goad Great Britain into a course of action that would lead naturally to a break to be followed, on Japan's part, by extending the present blockade from Swatow, its southern limit today, to the Indo China border.

Such a break the London government is clearly determined to avoid if possible even if it means leaning backwards in submitting to Japanese assaults. Yet oddly enough the same policy of weak-kneed retreat is and for some time has been pursued by Great Britain in the Mediterranean where it is strong. If Britain's Far Eastern policy makes sense, its Spanish policy does not. And vice versa.

All Souls' Day

By William Lyon Phelps

Second Of November.

This is November 2, a great day in the Roman Catholic Church. It is in commemoration of those who have died.

Now, whether one is Catholic or not, I think it is well on this day of days, celebrated in every part of the uncivilized world—I am not sure that any part is yet civilized—that we should think especially of those who have gone.

One of the strange things about growing old is this: when one is young, the vast majority of one's friends and acquaintances are living; when one is old, one is intimately acquainted with an enormous number who are no longer on the earth.

And it is strange also to reflect that when we were boys or girls, every man or woman we then knew, and indeed every man and woman then on the earth, is now dead. All those healthy young men and women, all those powerful and influential persons of middle age, all, all are gone.

When I was a little child, I remember seeing in a book called "Pictures of Life with Pen and Pencil" the picture of a white-haired old man bending down to a small boy, and the statement under it was "It seems but yesterday that I was a little boy like you." Well, I thought a good deal about that when I first saw it; but now that I am playing the older part in the drama of life instead of the juvenile, it does not seem to me that way at all. It seems a long while ago that I was a boy; so much has happened. Ibsen said when he was old that his entire life seemed to him like one quiet afternoon; but he had spent it in solitary composition.

• • • •

All Souls' Day has a curious fascination for me; and I know well that not in Russia, nor in Germany, nor in Italy, nor in Spain, can religion die. John Donne said, "Death, thou shalt die."

Of Course Welcome, But—

"Wait Till They Come Here" is the caption a New York tabloid gives some rather commonplace telephotos of the reception accorded in Germany to the Duke of Windsor and his lady.

Yes, wait till they come to the United States. That is precisely what some of us are dreading.

The duke and his spouse are not to be criticized because they wish to be "up and going" in the bright light. That is their privilege. It may be natural for them. What makes many Americans shudder at the prospect of their coming is that hundreds of tuft-hunters are going to make this country ridiculous by pursuing the "royal lovers." Only this comfort may be had: By the time the visitors have been paraded in a dozen towns and displayed on a thousand front pages, the American public will be heartily sick of them—as sick of them as Britain is.

MidTermConvention

G. O. P. Congressional Delegation Opposes Hoover Suggestion, Arguing For Freedom To Join In All Anti-New Deal Alliances.

By Henry Carter.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

THE NEWSPAPERS have announced that, at the November 5th meeting of the Republican National Committee, the committee will discuss and presumably take a decision with regard to the mooted proposal for a mid-term Republican convention, to be called for the purpose of redefining Republican doctrine and policy and of unifying party organization and activity.

The proposal is popularly and properly attributed to former President Hoover, who advanced it in an article in the September issue of the Atlantic Monthly, although John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee was prompt to state that even prior to the publication of Mr. Hoover's article a similar suggestion had been presented by others.

Mr. Hamilton's statement, while doubtless correct, was obviously meant to allay the apprehensions of certain elements in the Republican Party over what they feared might be a new bid by Mr. Hoover for party leadership. For while it is probable that Mr. Hoover had no such thought in mind, nevertheless the fact that it was he who made it publicly and has since been active in promoting it has carried certain inescapable political implications. And certainly it is evident that the proposal would not have received the prominence and consideration which it has without the sponsorship (or indorsement) of Mr. Hoover.

Landon Supporters See Bid For Leadership.

THE PROPOSAL has received a varied reception in Republican ranks. The supporters of Gov. Landon have tended to regard it as a direct challenge to his position and influence as titular party leader, and have either fought shy of it or have opposed it outright.

To be sure, it has been indorsed by Col. Knox, Landon's running mate in 1936, but the Governor himself appears to have reserved decision as to his stand in spite of his recent meeting with Mr. Hoover and former Gov. Lowden to discuss the future of the Republican Party, and in his subsequent radio speech of October 19 he was more than studious in his avoidance of any reference to the Hoover proposal. On the other hand a large majority of the members of the Republican National Committee, including the chairman, Mr. Hamilton, are reported as favoring the idea of a mid-term convention, although Mr. Hamilton has been careful to avoid any irrevocable commitment in the current discussion.

In contrast, there has been outspoken opposition to the proposal on the part of many Republican Senators and Representatives, notably Senators Borah and McNary, Representative Martin, of Massachusetts, and others, who regard the convention as more likely to promote discord than harmony, owing to the personalities and personal ambitions which would almost inevitably be involved, and who further question its right to be regarded as representative or to speak for the party.

This Congressional opposition is significant and its meaning is not far to seek. At the moment the Republican Senators and Representatives are bearing unusual responsibilities in their effort to play an effective part in the organization of a real Congressional opposition to the New Deal. In the present make-up of Congress, with its woeful underrepresentation of the Republican voters, their task, to be successful, requires frequent and nonpartisan coalition with anti-New Deal Democrats and Independents on specific issues. Such was their course in the case of the Supreme Court fight, and how effective such a strategy can be was amply demonstrated by the outcome of that battle.

To continue this strategy requires that they continue to act as individuals rather than as Republicans, and this in turn means that they must preserve an unusual degree of freedom from the trammels of party doctrine and disciplines. To the extent, therefore, that this essential freedom might be limited or embarrassed by party action, whether through the proposed convention or otherwise, they are bound to protest, and with considerable ground for justification. And it is their views which must ultimately prove decisive as to the fate of the convention, for if, as seems probable, they refrain from lending the convention a full measure of support, the convention itself will, as Senator Borah has observed, become merely a sounding board for the views of a number of private individuals lacking representative quality. It may even dwindle to the stature of the legendary Seven Tailors of Tooley Street, who began their petition to the Crown with the immortal phrase, "We, the People of England."

Republican Congressmen Hold Answer To Proposal.

THE ATTITUDE of the Republican members of Congress will thus be obviously vital as regards the proposed convention, but beyond that it will be even more vital as regards the future of effective Congressional opposition to the New Deal. The New Deal, if it is to be beaten at all, must be beaten in Congress, and the fact is that the major part of the existing Congressional opposition is made up, not of Republicans—they are in it but they are not very numerous—but of anti-New Deal Democrats and Independents. If there is to be a unified and effective opposition party outside, as well as inside Congress, these majority elements must not only participate, but must lead the way and take the seats of honor.

There seems to be some realization of this consideration in the Republican ranks. Former Senator Walter Edge, of New Jersey, has recently voiced an appeal that the proposed, mid-term convention be broadened so as to include all elements of opposition to the New Deal, regardless of party affiliations, and to confine the role of the Republican National Committee to the purely mechanical function of making arrangements for the meeting.

Formulation of political doctrine he would limit to two or three obvious propositions, such as a return to sound budgetary and fiscal policy, maintenance of an independent judiciary, and the restoration of a balance of powers and of representative government. For the rest, he would have the Republican Party refrain from any attempt to control or dominate the convention.

This is a distinct contribution to the discussion, and one pointed in what would seem the right direction. Nevertheless it still falls short of the actual requirements of the situation, for no amount of official party disavowals of nonpartisanship could cover up the fact that it would be a convention initiated and called by the Republican Party.

It would be damned from birth politically by its association in the public mind with a discredited party and leadership, and as such it could not hope to attract more than a fraction of the anti-New Deal Democrats and Independents whose help and co-operation is essential to a unified opposition.

The sad fact is that the Republicans, regardless of any inherent soundness in their views or demonstrable justification for their sentiments, still have two strikes on them politically every time they come to bat as Republicans. Until the New Deal is a great deal more unpopular than it is now their motto must be "Those also serve who only stand and wait."

Opposition Leadership Today Held By Democrats.

THE PRESENT opposition leadership is not Republican but Democratic—it is in the hands of such individuals as Senators Wheeler, Burke, Clark, Byrd, to name but a few, and they are all Democrats. The Republicans in Congress have recognized this by the extent to which they have followed their lead, and until these real leaders of the opposition give the signal, any independent effort by the Republican Party as such to organize an opposition is not only doomed to failure but may seriously jeopardize the future of any effective Congressional opposition and so precipitate the very dangers they are seeking to avoid, the dangers which flow from a one-man one-party government.

What then can the Republican Party do to check and control the extravagances and dangers of the New Deal? The answer is that the Republican Party of itself can do nothing but if Republican Senators and Representatives continue to support the opposition leadership as they have in the past year they can do a good deal.

It is necessarily a course of limited objectives, of temporary alliances for specific legislative objectives. It calls for patience, self-abnegation, a certain "passion for anonymity," for intelligent opportunism and the instinct for opposition to arbitrary government rather than for the application of a set of formal political doctrines or a synthesized program of reform. Political doctrine and "constructive alternatives" will emerge in due course, but the fight is on now. Perhaps this is what Gov. Landon had in mind in his radio speech when he eschewed all mention of the proposed mid-term convention and instead listed specific New Deal legislative and administrative failures.

A new session of Congress will shortly convene, and it is there that the issues will be made and joined. The Administration is perceptibly weaker than it was a year ago, some odd-looking New Deal chickens are coming home to roost and recent developments have created an atmosphere in which healthy political criticism and opposition can begin to make itself felt.

The Republicans in Congress can contribute greatly to restoring balance between the Administration and the opposition, but to do it they must stick to the present opposition leadership. The Republican Party organization can also help, but to do it they must avoid embarrassing or cramping their congressional representatives and the congressional leadership these must follow. It is with these considerations at heart that they should query and weigh the utility of the Hoover proposal for a midterm convention.

Drinkers unfortunate enough to be caught in Halloween arrests got their first "break" in several months before Judge Hobart Newman, who served his first term in the District branch of Police Court yesterday.

Fines did not exceed $10 or ten days in most of the cases. Last month, Judge Robert E. Mattingly was giving terms up to 60 days to "repeaters."

Yesterday's cases listed the usual number of after-holiday excuses. Strangest was one placed on a police dog.

Ruth Jones, 50, accused of being intoxicated, told Judge Newman she was not staggering, but was being jerked from side to side on New Jersey avenue by the dog which was on a strap. Judge Newman sympathized, but only to the extent of holding her fine to $10.

Gifts to Chest Show Increase Of 12 to 33%

Rally for Southeast Drive Set for Thursday Night at 7:30.

Substantial increases, ranging from 12 to 33 per cent, in a number of contributions to the Community Chest obtained through the special assignments unit featured the report meeting of that unit at the Willard Hotel yesterday.

Richard W. Hynson, unit chairman, called attention to a statement by W. J. Cameron over the Columbia network Sunday night.

"When we speak of helping people today," declared Cameron, "we do not mean a charity that maintains them in their plight, but a wisdom that lifts them out of it and strengthens them against relapse. We no longer talk about environment, we tackle it."

Among the contributions announced were those of Mrs. Cora Berliner, $4,500; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, $3,000; Mrs. Willard H. Brownson, $2,000; Mr. and Mrs. William McKee Dunn, $800; the Goldenberg Co., $1,200; William Hahn & Co., Inc., $1,500; Mrs. Chandler Hale, $1,000, and D. J. Kaufman, Inc., $1,000.

Other donations include those of Mrs. Edwin B. Parker, $1,500; Peoples Life Insurance Co., $1,000; Joseph Sanders, $600; Terminal Refrigerating and Warehousing Corporation, $600; Mr. and Mrs. Corcoran Thom, $1,000; Mr. and Mrs Hugh A. Thrift, $500, and Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Wilmer, $100.

Dr. Homer K. Butler, chairman of the Community Chest campaign in Southeast Washington, called a rally of campaign workers in that district for 7:30 p. m. Thursday, at the new Friendship House, 619 D street.

16 in Relief Fraud Fight 2-Year Terms

By the Associated Press.

Judge W. L. Stumbo, of Floyd County, Ky.; Arthur C. Carter, mayor of Prestonburg, Ky., and 14 other persons appealed to the Supreme Court yesterday in an effort to escape serving two-year terms in the penitentiary. They were convicted of using the mails to defraud in connection with the distribution of relief funds.

The group, by means of forged certificates from forms of the Kentucky relief commission, caused the commission to pay out funds to merchants, who kept some of the money and split the rest.

Roosevelt Peace Plea 'Welcomed' by Turkey

Ankara, Turkey, Nov. 1 (AP).—President Kemal Ataturk, referring to President Roosevelt's Chicago speech denouncing aggressor nations, today declared that Turkey welcomed "in the most favorable spirit every appeal aiming toward the peace of the world."

Ataturk expressed faith in the League of Nations and in a two-hour address to the national assembly said that "harmonious development of relations with her neighbors is the chief objective of Turkey's foreign policy."

Fromberg Will Speak At B'Nai Israel Lunch

Judge Joseph H. Fromberg will be guest speaker at luncheon of the B'Nai Israel Sisterhood at 12:30 p. m. today at the Willard Hotel. The affair is to benefit the B'Nai Israel Synagogue at Fourteenth and Emerson streets northwest, and an entertainment will be presented by members of the sisterhood.

Mrs. Louis L. Prawde is chairman of a committee in charge of the event, other members being Mrs. Samuel Benjamin, Mrs. Morris Friedenberg, Mrs. Samuel Mandy, Mrs. Henry Segal and Mrs. Leo Garner.

Britain Declines Court For International Crime

Geneva, Nov. 1 (AP).—Great Britain today turned down a proposal to establish an international criminal court to try cases of international terrorism.

The British delegate, Sir John Fischer Williams, told the League of Nations conference on the repression of terrorism that Britain would not oppose the establishment of the court, but could not participate. He said British law was sufficient to deal with terrorism.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

They Broke a Lance

Chivalry rides like a white plume among the U. F. W. A. knights of adjustment. They heard all 'bout it, they did—how the girls in the Bureau of Engraving had to use wash cloths on their hands when the cloths weren't sanitary.

And so they rode out, chests abreast, and cornered the responsible parties in the bureau. "How come," they said, in effect, "that these ladies fair have to use wash cloths that have only been dipped in some mild solution? Such procedure might hold gems of economy, but there's germs in them gems and we want wash cloths of these ladies fair made sanitary."

The conference ended in success. The wash cloths now are sterilized and a grievance is adjusted. And what's more—though less romantic—the committee got results on a speed-up complaint. Then, to top off the day, 20 members were added to the Treasury local's rolls. But that's all unglamorous stuff. The toast is raised on a lance's sharp tip to that service for the ladies.

Notes from everywhere: The courageous editor of the I. D. R. A. News invites a kick, as follows: "Let's have a few rousing brickbats. Let's have constructive criticism. Let's have the views of the Cassandras—the prophets of Evil." Oh, Mr. Barrett, how you do talk . . . Steady employment was regarded as the most important of plant personnel policies by industrial workers recently questioned by the Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania . . . Most Government workers will share the view . . . The chief event among A. F. G. E. people is the banquet which Adjutant General's Office Lodge, No. 2, will give tomorrow night in honor of national Vice President G. Carroll Dimond . . . The event, in token of Dimond's services to the lodge and the national organization, will be held in the Gingham Club, beginning at 8 o'clock . . . The 1937-38 European demand prospects for American prunes now appears to be even brighter than was indicated two months ago, according to a Government report that may not interest you or me, but which may interest someone .

Comes now an ever-interesting person with a more than interesting booklet. The person was Grover Ayers; the booklet concerned an organization of your fathers by profession, the Government clerks of 1817.

Yellowed, slightly torn, the booklet is titled "Articles of the Provident Association of Clerks employed in the civil departments of the Government of the United States within the District of Columbia." You found, by reading through an expected preamble, that the organization was a benefit one, having to say of itself:

"This association shall be composed of clarks employed in the civil departments of the Government of the United States within the District of Columbia, and its object shall be the benefit of the families of such clerks after their decease." Each clerk was required to sign the articles, after the fashion of sailors who first board ship.

The meeting date of these early worthies was on "the first Saturday of January, April, July and October, annually." The president could call meetings otherwise at appropriate times. Of course, the organization has long joined the dead it was set up to benefit, and the means by which it might reach its end are specifically stated.

"If this association shall be dissolved by any event or in any manner whatever, the funds then belonging to it shall, after all claims and demands thereon are satisfied, be divided among the families of deceased members, according to the sums paid in by such members, respectively." But there could be no dissolution so long as ten members remained and agreed to keep up the association. Evidently, by the absence now of the organization from the mortal scene, ten members didn't agree to do this.

Bill Green Forever: Speaking before the recent convention of the A. F. of L., President Stengle of the A. F. G. E. said in no uncertain terms how he regarded Bill Green: "I shall be only a moment," he stated, "As the national president of the A. F. G. E., with a membership stretching from Alaska in the Northwest to Cuba and Panama in the South, I wish to express our deep appreciation for the sterling leadership of William Green during the past year. We have been in close contact with his activities. We have observed him in action and we feel that we have in William Green the Rock of Gibraltar toward which to look in the hour of stress and strain."

Parmele Pleads Not Guilty to Fraud Charges

Arlington Man Arraigned in Toledo; Case Continued; Bond Postponed.

By the Associated Press.

Toledo, Ohio, Nov. 1.—A plea of innocence was entered for William R. Parmele, of Arlington, Va., president of the Toledo Guaranty Corporation, when he was arraigned here today on charges of passing six worthless checks.

At the request of Christian Webb, Parmele's attorney, the arraignment was continued until November 10 and fixing of bond was postponed. Parmele is held in the Safety Building.

Warrants for his arrest were served on Parmele by Sheriff Howard B. Fields at his home in Arlington last Wednesday. District Attorney Thomas J. O'Connor, of Lucas County, Ohio, describing Parmele as "a post-depression Ponzi," arrived in Arlington Friday to take the local businessman back to face the Toledo charges.

Claims aggregating $500,000 have been filed against the Toledo Guaranty Corporation in bankruptcy proceedings pending in Toledo. The organization is under investigation by the Ohio State securities division, the United States attorney's office there and the Postoffice Department.

Besides the Toledo firm, Parmele headed a concern known as Parmelee, Inc., with offices in the Woodward Building in Washington. The concern was ostensibly engaged in real estate development of Henderson Farms, a tract of several hundred acres on Lee boulevard near East Falls Church.

Transatlantic Passage Now Costs $5 More

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—That trip abroad will cost more next year. Steamship lines belonging to the Transatlantic Passenger Conference today put into effect a $5 increase in all classes in present transatlantic passenger fares and indicated summer rates in 1938 would be higher than in 1937. Higher operating costs was given as the reason.

Linemen Stage Strike Atop 2 Power Poles

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—Five linemen chose the tops of two 50-foot poles at a busy intersection in Flushing today for a sit-down strike. Swining on safety belts, they waved signs protesting the discharge of several hundred employes of the Consolidate Edison Co. Police centered their efforts on moving gawking crowds and traffic.

212 Highway Employes Laid Off in Maryland

Baltimore, Nov. 1 (AP).—The State Roads Commissioned laid off 212 laborers throughout the State today—nearly a fourth of the 871 employed.

Dr. Homer E. Tabler, chairman of the commission, said the lay-offs were due to budget restrictions by the legislature. He said the commission would try to find jobs for the furloughed men with county road departments, but that it might take some time.

Schroeder Joins United.

Maj. R. W. Schroeder, former assistant director of the Bureau of Air Commerce, has been appointoed vice president of United Air Lines and placed in charge of operations, President W. A. Patterson announced yesterday. In his governmental service Maj. Schroeder supravised plans for greater safety in air transport.

Robert L. Corby's Funeral in Jersey

Funeral services will be held today for Robert Lockwood Corby, 58, former resident of this city, at his home in Ridgewood, N. J., where he died Saturday.

Mr. Corby was for many years secretary of the Corby Baking Co. here, and left Washington about 17 years ago to enter the yeast manufacturing business. He was one of the pioneers in the invention and development of mixing, moulding and weighing machines—now standard equipment in all bakeries.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Rose Corby; three daughters, Mrs. Elizabeth Sturges, Mrs. Mildred Maloy and Mrs. Virginia Thompson; his mother, Mrs. Louise A. Corby; a sister, Mrs. May Corby Ward, and a brother, Clarence W. Corby.

We knew you'd prefer this finer veal!

It's no surprise to us that everybody's insisting on Swift's Branded Veal. We knew anyone who tasted this fresher, finer-flavored veal would never want any other kind.

Swift's Branded Veal owes its remarkable goodness to a new method of packaging, the Saniseal wrapping, illustrated below. Doubly protected this exclusive, sanitary way, the veal reaches us—and you—with all its original freshness and fine flavor sealed in.

Try a cut of this delicious veal today . . . every cut is plainly marked so you can easily identify it. You'll see the brand—Swift's Premium or Swift's Select or Swift's—on the piece when you buy.

FRESH AND DAINTY, Swift's Branded Veal is shipped to us in bags of a special type paper. A truly revolutionary development, for up to now veal has commonly been shipped with the hide on; with the hide off, the meat has been practically unprotected. Only Swift & Company's Veal is Saniseal-Wrapt.

AND UNDER THE PAPER, a second special wrapping! This one is of tight-fitting, snowy muslin. This double Saniseal wrapping, exclusive with Swift & Company's Veal, gives marvelous protection, preserves freshness and delicious flavor. You don't know how good veal can be till you taste this of Swift's.

IT'S BRANDED! Three grades of this finer veal are plainly marked, both on the whole piece and on single cuts. Strips of cellulose down the side bear the brand name—Swift's Premium, Swift's Select or Swift's. All three are Saniseal-Wrapt for freshness and delicious flavor. Treat your family to this new veal tonight!

Saniseal-Wrapt, fresher! and branded!

As dealers who can supply you with Swift's Branded Veal, the kind that is Saniseal-Wrapt, we are authorized to display this seal.

Barricades Strengthened At French Concession

Fearing a stampede after the Japanese threat to bomb Nantao, old Chinese city adjacent to the French concession at Shanghai, authorities protected the gates with barbed wire and sandbags and then reinforced the guard.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

How to Break Off Widow's Affair With Man Who Exploits Her, Is Question of Another Admirer.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a man 47 years old and have been in love with a widow of 40 for some time. I have known her for years (and knew her husband before his death) as we were brought up together in the same town. She is sincere, loveable and sensible, but has been swept off her feet by a man who is using her for his own convenience. Consequently she hasn't much time for me, and has refused to marry me because she is in love with him. This man will never marry her. I know him and his type very well. He is a fascinating lover and is taking advantage of this lady's sincere love for him. She goes on week-end trips with him, but I happen to know she always pays her own share of the bills.

* * * *

For her sake, I should like to break up this affair, and have even thought of writing to her brother and telling him the whole story as I know it. This man is ruining her life, and unless his selfish exploitation of her is stopped, he may ruin the life of her daughter as well. When he finds a younger woman, this one will be thrown aside like an old shoe and I fear for the consequences to her, as she loves him with all the steadfast loyalty of her kind.

* * * *

If I could feel that this man loved her, I would turn aside and try to forget her. Yet because I know how good she is, I would like to thrash him within an inch of his life for what he is doing to her. I would marry her at any time, under any circumstances. Just now she is extremely unhappy, but too proud to admit it. How can I make her understand? What shall I do—thrash the man? or is there anything else you can suggest

C. C. R.

Inteference Unwarranted.

DEAR C. C. R.: So far as you are concerned, this woman's life is her own to manage or to mismanage as she sees fit. The fact that you love her, feel a protective concern for her welfare and would like to make her your wife, does not invest you with the right to interfere—in any way, shape or form—with what well may be her mistaken pursuit of happiness. It is vulgarly intrusive to presume to offer help of any kind to a person who not only does not ask help, but who goes to extremes in indicating that help is neither needed nor wanted. To write to her brother would be to stoop to spiteful gossip, more self seeking than altruistic in aim. To "thrash" the man she loves, simply because she loves him less wisely than well would not only anger and humiliate her, but would no doubt put you outside the pale of her friendship forever after.

* * * *

All you can do is "stand by," giving her whatever psychic protection (and that is considerable) stems from an unselfishly ardent and stanch desire to be of help, should an occasion ever arise where help is solicited. If you would have her "understand" how sincerely you wish for her a peaceful and substantiated happiness, you can best register this devotion by offering it in the wrappings of friendship, so to speak.

* * * *

Telephone her occasionally, ask her to lunch, send her books, and when you see her, talk to her impersonally and cheerfully about topics which are calculated to take her mind off herself and her present unhappiness. Only if she recognizes in you a man who is capable of rising serenely over emotional frustrations of his own, is she likely to come to regard you as one who could be for her a tower of strength and sympathetic understanding in whatever darkest hours are or may yet be hers. M. H.

The Cause of Blushing?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: One of my boy friends has a painful affliction. It is that he blushes shamefully most of the time. I notice it more when he is called on in school to recite, and also when we are together and he happens to meet one of his friends on the street or in any public place, for that matter.

* * * *

Naturally, I myself feel embarrassed for his sake and have been trying ever so hard to think of some way in which I might help him overcome the affliction. I don't think it is impossible since he is still in high school and should be young enough to outgrow it. You may say this is the result of an inferiority complex, but that I can't see, as he is good looking, has nice clothes and is a very likable person.

* * * *

I know he suffers under this handicap, as it seems to be getting worse all the time. Here of late, he can't even talk to me without getting crimson. I would certainly appreciate any advise you can offer. For if there is anything in my power I could do to help him, I surely want to do it. Sincerely,

PUZZLED.

A Nervous Phenomenon.

DEAR PUZZLED: Painful blushing of the kind you describe is known to physicians as a "vasomotor phenomenon," which has to do with the individual's nervous control—or lack of control—over the blood vessels. When the sympathetic nervous system is injured by word or thought, the persons who suffers from this sort of phenomena goes white with fear, or flushed with anger or confusion. The cure is deliberate self education of a kind which gives the individual conscious control over his actions and reactions.

* * * *

The greatest contribution you can make to your boy friend's mastery of blushing is to appear not to notice it; and by your attitude and conversation when with him, tete-tete or in larger groups, to do all you can to give him a feeling of poise and social adequacy. For instance, after he has made a blushing recital in class, you might tell him afterwards how well he recited; or remark on some point he had made that seemed to get over unusually well with the teacher.

* * * *

If I were advising the young man directly, I would make these suggestions (given me on his behalf, by the way, by a reputable diagnostician with psychiatric understanding of such an affliction): first, see a good psycho-analyst and inform himself on the whys and wherefores of the phenomenon, which usually is rooted in hypersensitivity of the kind which leads the afflicted person to suppose others are paying him far more attention, of a critical sort, than they really are. Secondly, to learn how to speak and act slowly and deliberately until he is conscious master of his social self. Thirdly, to make it a point to converse on subjects about which he is thoroughly informed with persons whose opinions or reactions he doesn't fear.

* * * *

For instance, if he would practice conversation with girls he doesn't care a snap of his finger about, until he could toss off glib generalities on commonplace topics with ease and poise, he wouldn't find it nearly so difficult to be articulate with a girl he really cared for. If he would purposely set himself to recording in memory, and analyzing in retrospect, the conversation of his contemporaries, I'm sure he would find that just about 90 per cent of all they say, which passes for wit or authoritative knowledge, is certainly no better, and probably much worse, than his own conversational output.

* * * *

What he should do is cast out self-consciousness and fear and embarrassment; stop trying to tower above his contemporaries; and try, simply, to be one of them, no better and no worse. Dr. Henry C. Link in his much-talked-of book, "The Return to Religion," ably maintains that social and professional versatility finally accrues in greatest measure to the person who isn't afraid to try and keep on trying, regardless of current failures. The social misfits and hermits, the "peculiar" people, the introverts, are those who daren't make the first effort, lest it not be crowned with full success.

To Top Your Winter Coat, a Feather, Velour or Fur Hat

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

IT IS IMPERATIVE that you dress up to your fur coat. The wrong hat, or one not harmonious with the luxury of the coat, will mar the smart effect of the entire ensemble. This applies not only to the correctness of the styling, but to the comfort of the chapeau when wearing a high-collared coat. It is decidedly uncomfortable to wear a hat with a brimmed-back, so wide that it is constantly hitting the coat collar. Narrow back brims, small hats of the toque or turban styles, off-the-face brims which soar to the skies, are best suited to the current fur coat mode. Materials, too, are vastly important for the hat which is to top a fur coat. Velours, fine felts, feathers, fur and fur-trimmed, antelope, are outstanding in this realm. For the casual type of fur coat or jacket there are new swagger type hats of velour and felt; simple yet chic, and in keeping with the styling of the fur garment.

Tonsilitis Diagnosis.

My attention has again been called to a mistake which is very frequently made in making the diagnosis of tonsilitis. This may occur, somewhat rarely, it is true, in cases of swelling under the jaw.

It is true that tonsilitis causes a swelling of this kind, but occasionally the swelling is due to a small stone which forms in the duct of the salivary gland, and many of these cases go a long time before the right diagonsis is made. In fact, I have a friend who is a doctor who went to a medical convention, and got a swelling under his jaw. He consulted a half-dozen high-grade specialists who were on the same floor of the hotel as he was. None of them fell to the actual diagnosis. About half of them said they thought he had tonsilitis or a swollen lymph node.

The symptom which is the diagnostic feature and which should give the case away in every instance is that the swelling occurs very rapidly as soon as anything is taken into the mouth. The salivary glauds secrete far more material than we realize, and when this material is dammed back by a stone in the duct, it causes quite a large swelling. It is also very painful.

One of my friends recently had a very acute attack, with pain under her jaw, and went to a surgical friend, who relieved it by taking five stones out of the duct of the submaxiliary gland on one side—stones which were almost as large as gallstones. They are quite easy to take out and the relief is immediate.

Blouses Are Bright.

CAPITAL MANNERS

By Margaret Wallace.

GOOD TASTE in the wearing and sending of flowers is of importance in Washington at this time of year, when both official and social circles exchange courtesies of this type.

One of the first essentials in the wearing of flowers is that the corsage or bouquet suit the costume and the occasion. Frequently hostesses are embarrassed by the receipt of several corsages from friends who expect her to wear them. It is poor taste for the sender of such floral tributes to designate on a card or note that the flowers are to be worn.

The hostess, if she does not wear the flowers sent her, should display them prominently in vases or urns in the drawing room and call the attention of the sender to them with a word of appreciation.

It is quite proper for prospective guests to send flowers for vases for a party and these are usually in better taste than corsage bouquets unless from a close friend or member of the family. Only a very intimate friend or member of the family should send flowers for the dinner or tea table with the stipulation that they are to be used in that way. Even family and intimate friends should consult the hostess before they send flowers for the table, because their selections might not conform with the plans of the hostess.

It is proper to send "party" flowers to friends or acquaintances. The formal way is to send them with a card either by hand or from a florist. The informal way is to bring the flowers in person. Unless the party is an informal one and there is a family or close relationship, this seems a little awkward.

With the approach of the debutante season, flowers for the debutantes are of very great importance. The debutante usually likes to wear or carry the flowers given by her parents. If she wishes to honor especially some relative or friend, it is quite proper for her to make her selection from among the bouquets and corsage bouquets sent to her.

While most women like flower corsages that can be worn on the shoulder, there is no rule of good taste that makes this necessary. Sometimes flowers at the waistline are most effective. With a tailored suit, a single flower in the lapel is in much better taste. Unless the afternoon costume is a very dressy one, corsage bouquets for afternoon or daytime wear should be very conservative. Nothing seems so out of place as a daytime costume completely overshadowed by imposing sprays and clusters of flowers. Gardenias should be limited to two large blossoms, or three, if they are small, for daytime wear. A single orchid is much more effective than a whole "rope of them."

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Nov. 1.

IT IS always interesting, in a slightly morbid way, to listen in briefly to the shop-talk indulged in by the various occupational groups in the salons and saloons of this gabby town.

ALICE HUGHES.

When we fashion girls gang up after dinner we immediately go into our dance on merchandise, dress design and personalities who are absent—leaving the poor men to woo forgetfulness with the jug of Scotch, or to stare each other out of countenance, the poor wretches. Writers, glass in hand, excoriate all other fellow-craftsmen not present and all editors so far blind to their genius. At present the local literati are spending happy evenings practically tearing the corduroy britches off Mr. Ernest "Hairy-Chest" Hemmingway on account of his new novel. Musicians dote on denouncing all conductors, save the sainted Arturo Toscanini, as musical dolts and bums, not to say chiseling exhibitionists.

I have now moved into a new world, the radio, and the off-mike chatter of announcers and commentators is just what you'd expect—namely, endless discussion and steamy argument on the pronunciation of words. The Unabridged Dictionary is their constant pal—and cruel critic. Men like Lowell Thomas, McNamee, Jean Paul King and Gabe Heatter love to gas about words. Some demand the Henglish pronunciation of words like secretary (sectry) and necessary (nessessry). Some shout for eether against eyether, and bin instead of bean. One camp says "gahla"—another "gayla." They scrap over the English and Roman pronunciation of Latin words. How they do go on, these lads, who in their pre-radio days talked any old way, from Bowery to Boston. Well, as they say, it's a living, and what are announcers, after all, but grown up boys in long pants?

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Bulletin 462 on the approach of the royal Windsors. At this writing the town roars with whispers about where Their Nibs will hang their hats and umbrellas. One report says the Fifth avenue super-apartment of the late Arthur Brisbane, as big as the Yale Bowl. Another declares their American pied a terre will be another Fifth avenue joint lately occupied by Gertrude Lawrence. If His Highness is so steamed up about modern housing, why doesn't he try a Bowery flop-house, a shilling a night, and see how the other half really exists, if it does? . . . .

I went to that super-stage hit, "The Women," again a few nights ago, and found the Ethel Barrymore Theater jam-packed on a Monday evening, traditionally the theater's lowest ebb. A newcomer in the cast was Enid Markey in the small role of the gossipy nailpolisher. Over 20 years ago Enid was leading woman in many a Bill Hart movie. Looks fine, and does her little part ditto. . . .

* * * *

But do my eyes deceive me, or are many of those ladies getting fat? If so, it is easy-living in a sensational hit, month after month. Actresses, like we reporters, should go hungry now and then, for the good of the hips as well as soul! . . .

* * * *

Ted Peckham, the young Clevelander whose escort and shopping services here have won him note and probably pelf, has just written to thank me for various mention of his activities in the past year and jocosely offers me an escort at half price when I choose to go pub-crawling and dawncing, if ever. Thanks, Theodore, but I always have the hapless helpmate on hand to squire me here and there when sober and in the mood.

* * * *

Well, the town's all set now for a hard winter. Mrs. Harrison Williams, "The 50 best-dressed women in the world," has turned up after several months in Capri. Well, Mona, have you plenty of new glad rags for the shindigs?

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THE catch to most French furniture is that it would take such a lot of living up to. A lady with an average American home couldn't begin to keep those delicate brocades and pale rugs looking presentable, not to mention the slender fragility of so many of the chairs and settees. Just picture haw long they'd last with a former halfback tilting on their rear legs! They were made for satin-clad courtiers living in palaces.

And yet, there's no denying the fact that French furniture has grace and graciousness. The answer those who do like the rhythmic lines of French furniture, but don't have a royal menage to put it in, is French provincial furniture. This was the everyday furniture of eighteenth century France, for not all men were kings or dukes, even in those days. The provinces of France developed a type of furniture that copied the gilded pieces of the court, but in more substantial lines, in simpler woods, in practical coverings. This French provincial furniture has great charm and suitability for the average American home.

Reproduced mostly in walnut or beech, it follows the general lines of French court furniture. Chair seats were often, though not always, of rush; otherwise of stout cottons. Fabrics used for upholstery were simple and durable, the famous toile de Jouy types were widely used. Brass-headed tacks frequently finished the upholstered edges. Ladder-back chairs had wavy lines instead of straight. Curves and scrolls were the important themes in line and ornament. The open-shelf cupboards were favorites because their shelves could hold colorful provincial pottery.

If you're looking for a type of furniture that is gracious and beautiful, yet not "done to death," go to your favorite store and see what they have in French provincial. It lends itself to either rustics or semi-formal treatment.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

A FEW YEARS ago the weekly trip to the beauty parlor for a hair-do, manicure and occasional facial enabled the smart woman to face the world with the pleasant conviction that she had gone the limit in keeping up appearances. Today the de luxe salon may also offer a few minutes under the violet ray in a room equipped with beach sand and decorated to suggest the ocean; a massage that will either perk you up or put you to sleep, and a half-hour's exercise to give your figure the slim, sleek lines that are as important to appearances as a good coiffeur.

If you were to consult Helena Rubinstein, the internationally famous cosmetician, about your figure, she would advise first of all a thorough physical examination by a doctor who would not only gauge your capacity for exercise but would also cast a critical eye on your posture and figure faults. The gymnasium instructors find that it is the exceptional woman who does not have something radically wrong with her posture. Typical faulty posture is something like this: Toes turned out, knees locked, sway back, an outcurve of the tummy, double chins, and dowager's humps. Amazing improvement is made in most figures simply by remedying whatever is wrong with the posture.

Learn to Relax.

In addition, however, you are encouraged to learn to relax at will to stave off fatigue, that enemy of good posture and facial serenity. Some of the exercises are performed to the accomplishment of stretches and yawns, and it is a Rubinstein practice to alternate the exercises with stretches. Here is a stretching exercise known inelegantly as "the worm," which is a superb relaxes:

Lie on the side on the floor, arms parallel overhead on the floor, and feet stretched downward, one on top of the other. Using the muscles in the small of the back, bring the knees up and the arms down simultaneously. Then, still concentrating the movement in the small of the back, return to your full length position. You are told never to perform the same exercise more than three consecutive times, lest it become routine and uninteresting.

A De Luxe Exercise.

Now for another of Mme. Rubinstein's de luxe exercises—free! This one is known as "the clock." Lie on the side but with the face turned toward the floor. The legs should be straight down and the arms on the floor straight overhead. The top arms makes a complete circle like the minute hand of a clock, and the top leg makes a semi-circle like the swing of the pendulum.

Consult a Doctor Before Exercising, Advice of Helena Rubinstein.

You don't have to get into a lather over your daily dozen. All these exercises are performed very slowly, and muscle groups are relaxed as soon as they have completed their part in the movement. Don't imagine that you are not getting real exercise! The aim is to develop muscle tone rather than bulky muscle tissue and the exercises stress co-ordination and progressive relaxation—which is not the same thing as flopping.

Society Takes Interest In Modern Art Project

Brilliant Opening Is Scheduled for November 15; Afternoon and Evening Preview Also on Calendar.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Society's going in for art in a big way this season. With the opening of the Washington branch of the Museum of Modern Art scheduled for the 15th of this month, many a Capital miss or matron is taking time out from the constant whirl of partying to brush up on the famous French masters. Oftener than not, talk over the teacups these days turns to Gauguin, Cezanne, Van Gogh, Renoir and Seurat.

Dropping into the Library of Congress yesterday, I glimpsed a couple of social celebrities I never expected to meet there. One was reading Somerset Maugham's "The Moon and Sixpence," which is based on the life of Gauguin; the other was absorbed in a book on Renoir. I understand works on many modern artists are much in demand at both the Library of Congress and the Public Library. Looks as if the French masters might soon be of more interest than French frocks to Washington women.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Meanwhile, the modern art gallery is being redecorated, transformed from a rococo interior into a setting in the modern manner, with neutral walls and lights arranged to show the exhibition to its best advantage. The gallery—as everyone knows by now—is in the Metropolitan Club building at Seventeenth and H streets, and you may be sure that society with a capital "S" will be on hand at both the opening and the two preview receptions—the latter taking place in the afternoon and evening of November 14.

Project Has Notable List of Patrons

When Mrs. Dwight F. Davis puts her hand to anything, you can be sure it will be a success. That's why Washington knew, as soon as the modern art project was announced, it would be a sure-fire hit. In working out plans for the gallery Mrs. Davis has had the assistance of Mrs. George A. Garrett and Mrs. Dean Acheson, both of whom are on the committee on preliminary arrangements.

Among the patrons are a number of men and women, whose names will further insure the success of the project. These include the British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay; the Polish Ambassador, Count Jerry Potocki; the Italian Ambassador, Fulvio de Suvich; the Secretary of Labor, Frances Perkins; Victor Mallet, Gen. William M. Wright, Representative James W. Wadsworth, Canon Anson Phelps Stokes, Mrs. Philip Coffin, Mrs. Peter G. Gerry, Mrs. Carroll Glover, Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, Miss Jean Kellogg, Mrs. John Hay Whitney, Mrs. McCook Knox, Mrs. Marshall Langhorne.

Also Mrs. Leander McCormick-Goodhart, Mrs. John R. Williams, Mrs. Henry Leonard, Mrs. Frank Letts, Mrs. Higginson Rogers, Miss Marion Trumbull, Mr. and Mrs. Keith Merrill, Mrs. Adolph Miller, C. Powell Minnigerode, Fleming Newbold, Robert Lincoln O'Brien, Mrs. Amory Perkins, Duncan Phillips and Edward Weintal.

H. G. Wells to Be Widely Entertained

H. G. Wells, British novelist, who will open the Washington Forum 1937-38 season with an address tomorrow evening at Constitution Hall, will be guest of honor at a number of social events during his brief stay here.

Mrs. James F. Curtis, who has know Mr. Wells for a number of years, and who entertained for him on several of his previous visits to Washington, will give a dinner in his honor at the F Street Club this evening, her other guests also being friends of Mr. Wells.

The Spanish Ambassador, Dr. Fernando de los Rios, another who has known the novelist for many years, will entertain at luncheon tomorrow for him. Mr. Wells also will be guest of honor at a dinner tomorrow evening at the Sulgrave Club, with Mr. and Mrs. Harold N. Marsh as host and hostess.

Among guests invited to this event are Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Trowbridge, Dr. and Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, Mr. and Mrs. L. Corrin Strong, Mr and Mrs. R. Max Kauffmann, Miss Ann Palmer and Harold R. Peat.

Rep. Scott and His Bride Arrive in Capital Today

Representative Byron Scott, of California, and his bride of a few days will arrive in Washington for the winter season. They will reside at 2151 California street.

Mrs. Scott is the former Miss Eunice May Freed, of Los Angeles. Their wedding took place in that city last Saturday afternoon.

Adm. Standley's Wife Is Visiting In California

Plans San Francisco Stay; Admiral and Mrs. Defrees Returning to D. C.

From the West Coast comes news of Mrs. William H. Standley, wife of the former Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Standley. She has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Charles Wincote, at her home in Loma Portal, and from there will go to San Francisco for a short stay before returning to New York, where she and Admiral Standley live.

Underwood & Underwood.

We'd just promised Somebody or other that we weren't going to use any more pictures of the youngest set for a while, but when this one popped across the desk, the promises flew out of the window. The young man is 19-month-old Locke McLean, son of Mrs. Gale McLean, who is shown here with him. By the way, Mrs. McLean is one of the sponsors of the Friday Evening Supper Club, which keeps its first date of the season this Friday. For the rest of your information, she was formerly Mary Gibson, daughter of Mrs. Morris Ernest Locke.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

THE FRENCH EMBASSY is snapping out of its social doldrums with arrival the end of this week of two distinguished visitors—M. and Mme. Jacques Stern of Paris. Entertaining among members of the staff has been virtually nil since departure of the former Ambassador, Georges Bonnet, and, except for informal parties, there has been practically nothing gay at the Kalorama road embassy. However, Jules Henry, Charge d'Affaires, will give a dinner Friday evening in honor of the Sterns.

DUDLEY HARMON.

Unlike the average Frenchman, or whom even crossing the Channel is an Adventure, M. Stern has been to this country several times. His last trip was in 1933. At present he and his attractive wife are in New York. They will sail for France the end of this month.

Mr. Stern was formerly Minister of Colonies in the Flandin administration. He started his political career as a deputy for the Basses-Alpes and is a member of the Radical Socialist party which, as our professors used to tell us, is neither radical nor socialist. At one time he was Undersecretary of State for the Navy and later Minister for Merchant Marine in the Sarraut cabinet. Also a journalist, he was at one time manager of Le Monde Illustre.

Despite this heavily political background, he and Mme. Stern are in this country just for a pleasure trip.

GEORGE BIDDLE is as good a writer as he is a painter, to judge by an excerpt from the introduction to his new book on Adolphe Borie. This preface is presented in an attractive brochure gotten out by the American Federation of Arts, which has headquarters in the Barr Building here.

Mr. Biddle's new book is a de luxe edition, made by craftsmen, and has 50 illustrations. Mr. Borie, who died three years ago, was a Philadelphia man, a well-known artist and a close friend of the author.

Washington knew Mr. Biddle when he was down here a winter or so ago painting one of the murals for the Postoffice Department. Everybody was much intrigued when he painted into it Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor; "Mike" Ross, information chief of the National Labor Relations Board, and several other friends of his.

Mrs. Biddle, the former Helene Sardeau, is a well known sculptress and Mr. Biddle is a brother of Francis Biddle, who for a time was chairman of the National Labor Relations Board. Naturally, the name Biddle means Philadelphia.

IF YOU HAD the choice of meeting either the Duchess of Windsor or Greta Garbo, which would you take? Most of the women in town would undoubtedly take the duchess, but the men say they'd choose Greta Garbo any day.

This was discovered by Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, who has been invited to a dinner given by some Philadelphia people in honor of Stokowski. Greta Garbo will be asked to be a guest, but since the dinner comes the same week when the Windsors are supposed to descend on Washington, Mrs. Stoddard is baffled about what to do.

Personally, this writer would rather meet Stokowski than either Greta or Wallis. Seeing his movie, "100 Men and a Girl," reminded us that we almost did make his acquaintance one time. It was the evening after the famous conductor's farewell appearance here as regular leader of the Philadelphia Symphony. It was a horrible night, raining so hard that we decided to wait until the crowd disappeared before trying for a taxi.

As we stood on the pavement a lone cab stopped and a man poked his head out the window. "Would you like a lift?" he inquired. Alas! Two nimbler bystanders had leaped a puddle and jumped into the taxi before we realized that the man was Stokowski.

MRS. JOUETT SHOUSE will entertain at a luncheon next Monday for Mrs. Chase Going Woodhouse, who won wide acclaim as director of the Institute of Women's Professional Relations in which Mrs. Shouse is also very much interested.

Thousands of young women, especially in the depression, went to Mrs. Woodhouse for advice. Instead of suggesting that old standby, teaching, she did research in industrial opportunities with the result that she dug up some new fields for the fair sex, including such jobs as package stylists, designing boxes, jars and other containers for merchandize; motion pictures (not acting), and opportunities in public utilities, food manufacturing and distributing concerns.

'At Home' Today.

The Commandant of the Marine Corps, Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, and Mrs. Holcomb will be at home from 5 to 7 o'clock this afternoon at the commandant's headquarters in the Marine Barracks. They will be at home again Tuesday, December 7.

Miss Griffith, of Gaithersburg, Becomes Bride of R. B. Barton

Canon Rudd, of Rockville, Performs Ceremony; Couple Will Be at Home in Capital After Wedding Trip.

The marriage of a Gaithersburg girl and a Washington man took place last evening when Miss Agnes Riggs Griffith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lycurgus Mathews Griffith, of Gaithersburg, became the bride of Richard Barnes Barton, of Washington, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Barton, of Provo, Utah.

Cannon Arthur B. Rudd, rector of Christ Church, Rockville, officiated at the ceremony which was performed at 8 p. m. in the home of the bride's parents. An improvised altar in the spacious living room was decorated with autumn leaves, white chrysanthemums, white roses and tapers.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of pearl pink satin, fashioned on princess lines with long train and sleeves. Her pink tulle veil was held in place by a filet of pink satin and orange blossoms. Her ornaments were a seed pearl necklace and bracelet which were family heirlooms. She carried a white prayer book, to which was attached a corsage of white roses with streamers of white satin ribbon holding clusters of lilies of the valley.

Miss Margaret Griffith, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, wearing a wood rose velvet gown made on lines similar to the bride's. Her shoulder veil of the same shade was held in place by velvet roses of blending shades and she carried a bouquet of pink roses.

Judson Drayton Earle, of Texas and Washington, was best man.

At an informal reception for the bridal party, relatives and intimate friends the mother of the bride wore a gown of black lace with corsage of gardenias. Others assisting were Miss Olivia Myers, aunt of the bride; the Misses Annie and Alice Trundle and Miss Grace McNamara.

After a short wedding trip the couple will be at home at 1633 New Hampshire avenue.

Miss Guiler Named Bride's Attendant

Miss Patricia Guiler, daughter of Commander R. P. Guiler, U. S. N., and Mrs. Guiler, of Washington, yesterday was chosen by Miss Barbara Cary, daughter of Commander Robert W. Cary, U. S. N., and Mrs. Cary, of Newport, to be the latter's only attendant at her marriage Thursday to Lewis Pembroke Brown, of Hartford, Conn.

The wedding will take place in Berkeley Memorial Church in Middletown. The Rev. Duncan Ferser will perform the ceremony.

Miss Collier, Stephen Porter Married Here

Fall flowers, ferns and palms formed an attractive setting for the wedding last evening of Miss Clarissa Marie Collier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Collier, of 3529 Warder street, to Stephen Owens Porter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen T. Porter, of 1149 New Hampshire avenue. The Rev. H. A. Kester performed the ceremony, which took place at the Congress Street Methodist Church.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and her ivory satin gown was made on princess lines with a long train falling from the jacket. Her tight-fitting veil was attached to a halo cap trimmed with orange blossoms, and she carried white roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Porter Maid of Honor

Miss Claire Porter was maid of honor and only attendant of the bride. She wore a frock of sapphire blue velvet cut on princess lines and matching cap and slippers. Her flowers were talisman roses. Mr. Porter served as his son's best man, and the ushers were the bridegroom's brothers, Robert and Leonard Porter; Franklin Gibbons and Robert Mellefont.

A reception at Wesley Hall for the wedding party, families and close friends followed the ceremony. Mrs. Collier was gowned in black velvet trimmed with rhinestones and wore a corsage of talisman roses. The bridegroom's mother chose plum colored velvet and gardenias.

Will Live In Virginia

After a wedding trip to Atlantic City, New York and Boston, Mr. and Mrs. Porter will reside in Colonial Village. The bride is a graduate of Southeastern University and Mr. Porter attended Devitt Preparatory School and the American Institute of Banking.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding included the Misses Margaret and Anna Hoban, of Newport News, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gallagher, of Long Island, and Capt. and Mrs. Owens, of Norfolk, Va.

Italy's Envoy, Wife Attend 'Tovarich,' Fete Marta Abba

The Italian Embassy staff turned out almost full force last evening for the opening performance of "Tovarich," starring their countrywoman, Marta Abba. The Ambassador and Donna Matilde de Suvich were present with several guests whom they entertained at dinner. Later, they gave a supper party in honor of Miss Abba and other members of the cast.

Nobile Benedetto Campomazza, secretary of the embassy, also entertained at dinner last evening, taking his guests on to the play.

Mrs. Albert T. Fletcher, of 2400 Sixteenth street, has gone to New York to join Maj. Fletcher for the National Horse Show at Madison Square Garden. From there they will go to Lilypond, their summer home at Cohasset, Mass., remaining there until January 1.

At Wardman.

Mrs. B. Campbell Moore, of Reading, Pa., is at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Mrs. Lawson-Johnston, London, Entertained by Daughter in N.Y.

Noted Hostess and Friend of Duke of Windsor Is Guest of Mrs. G. G. Mason, Jr., of Havana, Former Washington Debutante.

Mrs. J. Orman Lawson-Johnston, a friend of the Duke of Windsor and well known in London society as a hostess, had the tables turned on her Sunday night when she was entertained in New York by her daughter, Mrs. George Grant Mason, jr., of Havana, who gave a dinner for her in the Neptune room of the Hotel Pierre.

It will be recalled Mrs. Lawson-Johnston is the Betty Kendall who collected the group of colored spirituals which Mildred Kolb Schulze arranged and for which Mrs. Mason drew the cover design.

It is expected that before her return to England, Mrs. Lawson-Johnston will visit here with friends who knew her during her former residence in this city as Mrs. Lyman B. Kendall.

Star of 'Victoria,' Others Address Press Women

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

An all-star luncheon was that of the Women's National Press Club at the Willard Hotel yesterday—with Anna Neagle, star of "Victoria the Great;" Herbert Wilcox, producer-director, and Rockwell Kent, artist and author, as guests.

"No compromise" was the theme of the talks of both producer and artist. Mr. Wilcox asserted that the immediate success of "Victoria the Great" demonstrated that a film must be thoroughly national to become international and also that there is no question of the reception of British films in America provided they are purely British and faithfully done. The effort of British producers to compromise in their approach to the American audience has been responsible for what has been considered prejudice against British films, he said.

Both Mr. Wilcox and Miss Neagle described the care which was taken in planning the picture and keeping the plot and the dialogue true to the history and character of the English Queen. Her private diaries, kept from the time she was 9 years old, were made available to them and provided entries so concise and brief as to be almost idiomatic film dialogue, said Mr. Wilcox. He gave Miss Neagle credit for providing fully 50 per cent of the story through her research.

In her talk, the young actress described her feeling when the part was given her and her interest in having revealed through the diaries, the youth of Victoria of whom she had always thought before as an old woman. Queen Victoria was innately a great character, said Miss Neagle, and Albert was one factor in bringing out this greatness.

The young star wore a high black hat over her fair curls and a wide veil which touched the shoulders of her brown kidskin cape. Her dress was black, and she wore a bouquet of purple violets at the neck. She spoke earnestly and disclaimed ability as a speaker—evidently much more at home in her role as Victoria than just being herself and talking about it—although it did not require the glamour of the theater to help her win her audience.

Mr. Kent was the final speaker, introduced by Helen Atwater, vice president of the club, who presided in the absence of Doris Fleeson, president. His "no compromise" stand was on his Alaska-Puerto Rican mural, over which there is now controversy. He also made an "on-the-record" speech on political conditions in Puerto Rico, which was more than a luncheon story for the women of the press.

In addition to the speakers, guests at the head table also included Earl Hanson, formerly of Puerto Rico; Ralph Roland, assistant general manager of R. K. O., and Hardie Meakin.

Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the Attorney General, a guest of Mrs. Genevieve Forbes Herrick, was present, as were Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, a guest of Miss Helene Kravatz; Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, author and editor of the D. A. R. Magazine, who has just returned from a lecture tour in New England; Mrs. W. W. Chiswell, who was with Miss Virgilia Stephens; Mrs. Emily Newell Blair and the guests of Mrs. Arthur Condon, who included Mrs. Ralph Worthington, Mrs. Fernando Cunaberti, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. William Shearer and Miss Anne Cloonan, of New York.

Welfare Society Sponsors Dance

Maritime Commission Body Plans Entertainment November 16.

The United States Maritime Commission Welfare Society will give a dance at the Wardman Park Hotel Tuesday, November 16.

The society is the successor to a similar organization established many years ago, which was known as the United States Shipping Board Welfare Society. Each employe of the commission is a member, and there are no dues. The objects of the society are to promote the general welfare of the employes and to render financial assistance to employes in sickness, death or other emergencies.

Funds are obtained by voluntary contributions, from subscription dances and, at one time, while housed in other quarters, the society operated a luncheonette which afforded sufficient regular income to take care of its charitable work.

Members of the executive committee are G. H. Helmbold, president; D. J. Houlihan, vice president; Eleanor Van Valey, secretary-treasurer; E. W. Andersen, assistant secretary-treasurer; C. D. Gibbons, J. F. Curtin, A. J. Williams, G. A. Viehmann, A. L. Lansdale, M. J. Killerlane and F. M. Darr.

Friendship, the home of Mrs. Edward Beale McLean, will be the scene Thanksgiving Day, November 25, of her annual Thanksgiving breakfast which will take place at midday.

Women of Cornell To Open Activities

First Meeting of Fall Set for Friday Night.

The Cornell Women's Club will hold its first fall meeting on Friday, at 6 p. m., at the home of Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist, 4939 Thirtieth place. This will be a supper meeting and the guest of honor will be Mrs. Olive Northrup Snyder, assistant alumni representative from Cornell.

All Cornell women have been invited and reservations are being made with Mrs. Gilchrist.

Mrs. Becker, Other Officers Attend Dedication of New Building.

The mountain school project of the Daughters of the American Revolution was extended last week when the District of Columbia approved school committee and members recruited from chapters became sponsors of a newly organized Tamassee club. The group will be concerned with maintenance and promotion of the D. A. R. school at Tamassee, S. C.

Tamassee was founded by the D. A. R. and is owned and controlled by the national society. As a proving ground for many of the objectives of the D. A. R., American ideals are perpetuated there through training in good citizenship and home making as well as in academic studies and industrial arts.

At Tamassee Friday, a new dairy, constructed with D. A. R. funds, dedicated with the president general, Mrs. William A. Becker, and a delegation of State and national officers present.

Yesterday, the Florence H. Becker recreation hall and a new water system (Sheppard Tower) were dedicated at the Kate Duncan Smith School, on Gunter Mountain, Grant, Ala.

The Daughters of the American Revolution also are expanding work for American Indians, with Mrs. Avery Turner, of Amarillo, Tex., as chairman of a committee directing the national program. Mrs. Richard Codman, of Sacramento, Calif., is chairman of a sub-committee in charge of better housing, aid to aged Indians, handicraft courses and tuberculosis clinics at Indian schools.

Mrs. Lee R. Pennington, State historian, will entertain the Richard Arnold Chapter Saturday, with State officers as guests of honor.

Women Hear Coal Aide on Price Fixing

Carson Urges Democratic Group to Take Interest in Government.

John Carson, consumers' counsel for the Bituminous Coal Commission, declared yesterday in a talk before the Womn's National Democratic Club at its weekly luncheon, that the greatest service he could give would be that of interesting the people of the country in their own Government.

"Unless we are successful in finding methods of arousing the citizens to an interest in their Government, we have little hope of preserving a democracy in this country," he asserted. "Lack of interest on the part of the general public may be attributed in a large measure to lack of interest in their candidates. Give us a candidate such as our President," he said, "and the people will be interested and will vote."

Carson pointed out the valuable part such an organization as the Woman's National Democratic Club could play in arousing people to intelligent participation in public affairs. Minimum coal prices are soon to be announced, he said, and that will be one opportunity for citizens to express views favoring or opposing them—and his office, he pointed out, was ready to hear either favorable reactions or complaints.

Carson was for 20 years on Capitol Hill, 7 as a newspaperman, and the remainder as "errand boy," he says, to the late Senator Couzens.

Among those at the lunchon were Mrs. Charles Hamlin, Mrs. Francis Brown, Mrs. Herbert Bratton, Mrs. Carl Ristine, Mrs. Royal Brasel, Mrs. Joseph Grigsby, Mrs. George M. Eckels, Mrs. Edward Meigs, Mrs. George Frysinger, Mrs. James LeCron, Mrs. Harry Fulton, Mrs. Claude Porter, Mrs. Thomas Seay, Mrs. Eugene Tighe, Mrs. Henry T. Wright, Mrs. John B. Gordon, Mrs. Robert Hunter and Mrs. Charles A. Riordan.

The educational committee will meet Thursday at 11 o'clock to hear an address by Mrs. Robert E. Nelson, of Palestine and Saudi-Arabia. The meeting is open to the public.

Mrs. Sorivi Leads Ball Committee

Mrs. Frances Sorivi is chairman of the committee for the ball at the Mayflower Hotel Thursday night for the Home of Italian Culture of the Italian World War Veterans of Washington and the Legion Auxiliary.

The proceeds of the dance and of the souvenir program will go to support a supplementary school for boys and girls of Italian birth, from the ages of 9 to 17, who wish to learn Italian. Classes will be held several nights a week.

Boys and girls may contact any member of the committee or the president of the Italian Legion Auxiliary, Mrs. Leona Speciale.

Academy Alumnae Set Mass Sunday

Alumnae of the Academy of the Sacred Heart of Mary will have its annual communion mass at St. Dominic's Church next Sunday at 9 o'clock. Following the mass, breakfast will be served at Mrs. K's Tollhouse Tavern, with Miss Margaret Harold as chairman of arrangements.

The alumnae entertained at tea last Sunday at the convent of the Dominican Sisters in honor of Sister Mary Regina. Miss Emma Ragan, president of the alumnae association, received the guests with Sister Regina and Sister Ethelreda, superior of the convent. Miss Elizabeth Dolan, Miss Marcella Lanigan and Mrs. Mary Maggio alternated at the tea table. Miss Evelyn Collins was chairman of the tea and was assisted by Miss Margaret Harold, Miss Agnes Auth, Miss Marie Hawk and Miss Bessie Mills.

Thanksgiving Eve Dance Set for Western Alumni

Jeanne Dorsch's Wedding Nov. 20

Miss Jeanne Dorsch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Michael Dorsch, whose marriage to Thomas J. Fitzgerald takes place November 20, is now completing arrangements for her wedding and has chosen her sister, Mrs. Eric W. Tattersall, to be her matron of honor.

Her other attendants will be Miss Frances Ann Fitzgerald, sister of the bridegroom-elect; Miss Anune de Baupre Beach, Miss Mary Theresa Donohoe and Miss Mary Jane O'Donnell.

Mr. Fitzgerald has chosen Joseph F. Meglen for his best man. The ushers will be Eric W. Tattersall, Dr. Leo I. Donovan, cousin of the bride-elect; Theodore W. Meyer and Theodore J. Himmelberg.

Count Vittorio Ciano May Visit Washington

Count Ciano is a brother of Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italy's foreign minister, and son-in-law of Premier Mussolini. It is possible he will come to Washington for a visit.

Tests at Polls Today for C.I.O. And Tammany

Bids for Power Made in Detroit and New York; Other Votes Watched.

Democrat, and J. Powell Royall, Republican, in selecting a Governor.

In New York interest centered in the mayoralty fight between LaGuardia and Jeremiah T. Mahoney, Tammany Democrat. Mahoney's campaign managers also assured him of victory "by from 250,000 to 400,000 votes," but he wound up his campaign on election eve with 12 major speeches.

Seek 2,075 Warrants.

The city was tense after one of the bitterest campaigns in years, and all available police were ordered on duty from 6 a. m., when the polls open, until after they close at 6 p. m.

Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine said the police department had applied for 2,075 warrants against persons registered illegally as voters, and that 7,437 "would-be" voters had been disqualified.

The voters were to register their choice for a long list of city and county offices, for candidates to Congress, the State Assembly, for district delegates to a constitutional convention and on six constitutional amendments.

5,521,625 Eligible to Vote.

Much interest centered also in the fight between Dewey and Tammany's Harold Hastings for a New York County district attorneyship.

Over the State 5,521,625 voters were eligible to cast ballots.

In Detroit, a campaign that revolved almost entirely around the question of whether the C. I. O., through its nominees for the mayoralty and the city council should be given control of the city Government, closed in an unprecendented burst of charges and countercharges by opposing candidates.

"Hagueism" the Issue.

In New Jersey, Clee, Republican standard bearer in the gubernatorial race against the Democrats' best vote getter, U. S. Senator A. Harry Moore, made "Hagueism" his big campaign issue against advice of many veteran leaders of his own party. They reminded him of previous failures when that issue was chosen.

Hague, Mayor of Jersey City, laughed at the newest threat to his leadership and predicted a 200,000-vote victory for Moore.

In Boston, chief interest in the mayoralty race narrowed down to James M. Curley, 63-year-old former Governor and three-time mayor; Malcolm E. Nichols, a former mayor; William J. Foley, Suffolk County's district attorney for 11 years, and School Committeeman Maurice J. Tobin. Two other candidates were former State Representative Albert Santossuosso and Carleton L. Brett.

In Connecticut, Bridgeport, New Haven and Hartford elect entire municipal tickets. The bid of John W. Murphy, New Haven Democrat, for re-election is opposed by George F. Barnes, Republican. In Bridgeport, Jasper McLevy, Socialist, sought re-election as mayor against opposition provided by George M. Coughlin, Democrat, and Henry Greenstein, Republican.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 1.—Road maintenance and construction took 34.35 cents of every dollar paid by Virginians in taxes during the past fiscal year, a tax chart released by Assistant Comptroller Sidney O. Day showed today.

Public schools received 11.19 cents from each dollar bill and crime and penal institutions required 3.27 cents. Criminal costs during the preceding fiscal year sliced 3.51 cents from each dollar, representing a slight decrease from last year.

The State again derived the bulk of its revenue from motor vehicle fuel taxes and licenses, totaling 27.44 cents of every dollar received for approximately $21,000,000.

Vocational Aid Held Up by U.S., States Charge

only "as much of the total sum shall be expended during the current fiscal year as can properly and usefully be spent—no more and no less."

Some irate members of Congress have demanded the payments be made, adopting the tone: "We appropriated the money. Where is it?"

The $14,483,000 appropriated for vocational education in the Interior Department bill is about double the sum available last year, and $10,000,000 more than was carried in the President's budget estimates.

The President made this point in a statement in August, and said he had appointed an advisory committee to study the experience under the existing program of Federal aid for vocational education.

He said the teacher personnel is not now available in most of the States to staff enlarged programs unless certification standards are reduced, and said the program is already suffering from poorly equipped teachers. His committee had found in a partial report that the present basis for distributing funds often increases rather than decreases the inequalities in educational opportunities.

The President admonished it would be "premature" to launch a greatly expanded program in some vocational education fields until his advisory committee has completed its survey. He charged "pressure" for the enlarged appropriation was exerted by an active lobby of vocational teachers, supervisors and administrative officers "interested in the emoluments paid in part fom Federal funds."

But protesting State officials and some members of Congress take the view that the money has been appropriated and the President has no authority to hold it up.

The funds are apportioned for various courses on a basis of population. For example, subsidies for carrying on agriculture education are allotted according to the farm population of the State. For the trade and industry course, it is based on the population engaged in that class of work.

Neutrality Spells Partiality To Jimmy Shen, of Shanghai

Former Post Reporter Says 'I Cheated Death' and Laughs at Wounds.

With a shrug for wounds from a Japanese bomb, Jimmy Shen, 28-year-old former Washington Post Chinese reporter, writes from Shanghai the not startling information that his countrymen see United States neutrality as partiality to Japan.

Shen, who came from the school of journalism of the University of Missouri to The Post in the late spring of 1935, told of his experiences in a letter to Embree Hoss Headman, Washington newspaperwoman and a classmate. He was wounded August 14, while covering the bombing of Shanghai by Japanese airmen, for the Central News Agency.

"That report of my being 'critically wounded'," he wrote, "was highly exaggerated. All I got were several flesh wounds, the most dangerous' one being on my skull about 2-5 of an inch deep. Nothing—just a bomb fragment. I lost some blood, but that was practically all there was to it.

"For a while (during that brief period of time when I was frightened out of my wits), it appeared rather dark, fancying that I was on the point of going up. However, when I regained my presence of mind and took a careful look at myself, I said to myself, 'Jimmy, you have cheated death'."

The Chinese newspaperman, hotly denying "jingoism or love of war," writes a fervent "Thank God, it is here at long last. The thing is that it had to come some day and the logical question is 'why not now?' Chance is about 50-50 that we may be licked, but, mind you, this is the best chance China has ever had for many, many years.

"To quote the Japanese premier, Japan 'must beat China down to her knees.' Instead of kneeling down, China has straightened her back, stood up and fought."

Of the Chinese attitude toward other nations, particularly the United States, Shen wrote "this is our war and it has never been our hope or wish to involve anyone else in it, much less the United States." But he feels other nations should open their markets for munitions "and plenty of them, too."

"But if the United States prohibits Government ships from carrying war munitions to either China or Japan," he asserted, "she is indirectly undermining our strength to resist Japanese aggression, whereas Japan, possessing a big navy and a large merchant fleet, will have the line kept open for her to receive an incessant and uninterrupted flow of supplies. Your compatriots may call it neutrality, but to us it spells differently—partiality. Whether it is deliberate or not is beside the point . . .

"The majority of the American people, if reports received here could be relied upon, are sympathetic toward China. For they still remember that it was no other than the United States which called the Washington conference in 1922, when the much-talked-of Nine-Power Treaty was signed. While it is true that that treaty has no provision for any working machinery, America's moral obligation thereon remains to be discharged."

Jimmy Shen is the son of a wealthy Shanghai merchant. He came to The Post for experience in American journalistic methods before entering the profession in his own country. He first attracted attention when he climbed to the belfry of St. Aloysius' Church and wrote a story of what he saw.

He covered Chinese New Year, Chinatown, arrival of Chinese dignitaries and the like. In those days he predicted a "free modern China," and declared he would help build it.

Anglo-Saxons to Bear Burden In Restoration of China Peace

If Europe hopes for something better from Brussels, it is very largely because of President Roosevelt's speech in Chicago on foreign affairs.

Just what this Chicago address really signifies is naturally for Washington to say, not London, Paris or Brussels. But the interpretation put on Roosevelt's speech in the principal European capitals is nevertheless vitally important in connection with the impending Brussels conversations.

Speaking very generally, Europe's impression of the President's speech may be boiled down as follows:

1. Roosevelt is ready to modify radically, if not to abandon outright, his neutrality policy, and he believes he can carry the country with him at least in emerging partially from strict isolationism.

2. This change in tone of America's foreign policy will doubtless be confined at first to the Pacific, but its extension later to Europe is visible on the horizon.

3. In practice, the most that may be expected in the way of positive co-operation of the United States with European countries in their endeavors to curb aggression and thus avert a general war, is economic action of some very cautious kind.

Choice of Sides Forecast.

In other words, Europe rightly or wrongly read into Roosevelt's words a nascent willingness on the part of America to abandon an indiscriminate neutrality policy which virtually applies an economic embargo to both aggressor and victim, and to substitute for it a modified policy which no longer puts both parties to the conflict on the same footing.

This does not mean, however, that Norman Davis and the other American delegates to the Brussels conference are believed to have in their portfolios any proposals calling for economic action against Japan. Both the President and Davis have made it quite clear that they regard mediation and conciliation as the primary aim of the Nine-Power meeting. The conference is unquestionably going to concentrate at first on attempts to conciliate or arbitrate between Japan and China.

It must be admitted at once that there is very little prospect of mediation being accepted by Japan. Tokyo has loudly and repeatedly proclaimed its unwillingness to tolerate any "foreign intervention" in her campaign to "restore peace and order in China." Thus there is no doubt that in the end the Brussels conference will have to decide what, if anything, is to be done in the event of mediation being rejected. And actually this question from the very beginning will constitute an important part of the unofficial negotiations between the delegates.

U. S., Britain Share Burden.

The real burden of the conference falls inevitably on America and Great Britain. The other signatories of the Nine-Power Treaty, Japan, China, France, Italy, Portugal, Holland and Belgium—are unmistakably leaving all leadership to the Anglo-Saxons. France, despite her tremendously important stake in the Orient — including Indo-China as well as great commercial interests in Shanghai and elsewhere in China—takes the attitude that she has her hands too full in Spain to do more than follow England's lead. Belgium's interests are confined almost entirely to certain Chinese railways. The Netherlands are somewhat seriously disturbed over the potential Japanese threat to Java and and Borneo, but also look to London for any initiative in the matter.

Italy's sympathies are all with Japan, as are Portugal's; and the same would be more or less true of Germany if, as is contemplated, she is invited to the conference.

Preoccupied with the Mediterranean crisis, unrest in Palestine and concentration of Italian troops in Lybia in addition to "submarine pirate" hunting and the situation in Spain itself, Britain is even more than usually loath to take on any new risks in the Pacific. Her natural tendency wil be to press the United States to assume the lion's share of whatever naval policing is to be done in the Far East.

Similarly, the American delegation may be counted on to emphasize to the English that, as they have the greatest stake in China, they should logically bear the brunt of any attempt to restrain or discourage Japanese expansion in Asia.

Must Face Facts Frankly.

Whether this mutual—and sterile—"buck-passing" that characterized the Geneva discussions on Manchuria is persisted in, or whether on the contrary it gives way to fruitful Anglo-American collaboration in the Pacific, depends very largely on a third "whether"—whether or not both the United States and Britain are at last prepared to face fully and frankly the facts of the Far Eastern situation, and so dig down to bedrock to find the only basis on which joint action can become possible and efficacious.

What is rock-bottom in this Far-Eastern crisis? Naturally the situation is very complex, and various factors have to be weighed carefully both in the Orient and at home in Washington, in the Mediterranean, as well as in London, and perhaps also in Berlin, Rome and Moscow. "Tout se tient," as the French are so fond of saying.

Nevertheless, beneath all these external complications, is it not sufficiently clear that the fundamental issues are these:

Is the United States, and is Great Britain, willing to stand idly by and let Japan realize her obvious aim of becoming the supreme, dominant power in Asia?

Must Decide on "Fighting Point."

If, as is quasi-certain, this Japanese supremacy menaces American and British commercial interests in China, are Britain and the United States willing to go to war to defend these interests? If not, are they disposed to struggle passively to defend them by economic action to restrain Japan?

In other words, are the peoples and the governments in America and Britain ready to look fearlessly ahead and face the implications of Japan's policy in China? Have they ever really asked themselves whether the "open door" in China is a fighting point, as the Monroe Doctrine has always been a fighting point for the United States, and freedom of passage through Suez and the Mediterranean a fighting point for Britain?

The answer is pretty plainly in the negative. It is fairly safe to assert that so far neither President Roosevelt nor Mr. Chamberlin, neither Cordell Hull nor Anthony Eden have either faced these questions fully or arrived at any final decisions regarding them.

Perhaps it would not be possible, nor even desirable, to decide finally what the British and American stand on these points would be. But if all the questions cannot be answered now, at least they could be asked now, and in fact they must be asked if an attempted Anglo-American collaboration in the Far East is not to be based on misunderstanding and therefore end in a fiasco.

Japan, one may be sure, is following a carefully-planned, long-term policy in China, outlined only after all the elements and implications of it have been thoroughly examined, not forgetting the English and American aspects of her scheme. Unless the United States and Britain can plan their collaboration as exhaustively, what chance have they of success?

Dr. G. B. Miller, Gynecologist, Expires at 75

Ill Since April, Physician Had Served on Boards of Two Hospitals.

Dr. G. Brown Miller, 75, prominent physician and specialist in gynecology, died yesterday at his home, 4409 Dexter street northwest. He had been ill since April.

Dr. Miller had been in practice here nearly 40 years. He had been a member of the medical boards of Columbia and Garfield hospitals.

Born in Rappahannock County, Va., Dr. Miller was graduated from the University of Virginia School of Medicine, following undergraduate study at Virginia Military Institute, where he was awarded the Jackson Holt Medal, highest scholastic honor in the college. He later took postgraduate work at Johns Hopkins University and the University of Leipsig in Germany.

Dr. Miller was a member of the American Medical Association, the District Medical Society, the American College of Surgeons and the Clinico Pathological Society. He was a member of the Chevy Chase Country Club and a former member of the Cosmos Club.

He leaves two sons, G. Brown Miller, of Washington, and Lieut. Frank H. Miller, U. S. N.; a sister, Mrs. McCalla Boulware, of Fredericksburg, Va., and three brothers, James J., R. Brooke and D. Lyle Miller, of Rappahannock County.

Mrs. Sarah Waite Burial Tomorrow

Mrs. Sarah M. Waite, 71, mother of Mrs. Pauline Birch, of Arlington, Va., died yesterday at the home of her niece, Mrs. A. A. Moore, at Statesville, N. C., it was learned here last night.

A native of New Columbia, Pa., Mrs. Waite had lived in Arlington for four years. Her husband, John F. Waite, printer in Danville, Pa., for many years, died in 1934. Since then Mrs. Waite hade made her home with her daughter in Arlington.

She also leaves another daughter, Mrs. Alice Ninde, of Falls Church, Va., and two grandchildren.

Funeral services and burial will be held tomorrow in Danville.

Committeewoman From Minnesota Dies

Minneapolis, Nov. 1 (AP).—Mrs. Oscar Adams, 52, Democratic National committeewoman for Minnesota, died today. She had been ill for two months. She was born in Minneapolis and lived here all her life. She was an early advocate of woman suffrage and was successively precinct, ward and county Democratic chairwoman.

"This legislation should authorize annual appropriations to be made available to the corporation to cover any impairment of its capital, as shown by an appraisal of its assets from year to year. Under this plan each year's budget will reflect the losses, if any, sustained by the corporation."

The President pointed out that his revised budget summation carried a $100,000,000 estimate for the CCC, "which should be adequate to cover the needed capital for the fiscal year 1938."

He said it would be necessary for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make definite commitments to the CCC up to $85,000,000, pending authorization for the agency to raise its own funds.

"When the legislation referred to has been enacted, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation will be relieved of this temporary commitment and reimbursed for any Eccles at Hyde Park.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Nov. 1 (AP). Marriner S. Eccles, Federal Reserve System head, brought to President Roosevelt's budget discussions today word on business and financial conditions.

Eccles was at the Roosevelt home here while Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Daniel Bell, budget director, went over budget matters with the President. He remained for some time afterward.

After his interview with Mr. Roosevelt Eccles sent word he had nothing to say. Later he told newsmen:

"It was merely a general discussion of the economic situation covering a broad field. We appraised the situation in many lights."

After his conferences today the President planned an early return to Washington. He will vote in the Hyde Park and Dutchess County elections tomorrow and probably will entrain tomorrow or Wednesday for the Capital.

ions were arrested in March last year, several days after assassination of Col. E. Francis Riggs, chief of the Puerto Rican Island police, by two young members of the Nationalist Party.

Albizu Campos, as leader of the party since 1930, had led a campaign for complete independence from the United States and from "American imperialism." To his party was attributed more than 60 bombings and shootings in recent years. In November, 1935, four members of the Nationalist Party had been shot by police in a riot at the University of Puerto Rico.

Albizu Campos' call for vengeance aginst police, delivered at the funeral of the four party members, was believed to have led directly to assassination of Col. Riggs.

The Nationalist leaders and seven party associates were brought to trial July 14 for conspiring against the United States Government. Albizu Campos, graduate of Harvard University and an able lawyer, defended himself. He accepted full responsibility for activities of the Nationalist Party but denied many specific acts attributed to it.

On July 19 the first trial ended with the jury evenly divided and Judge Robert A. Cooper ruled a mistrial. A second trial opened on July 27 and four days later the eight men were sentenced. Their terms ranged from two to six years in a Federal penitentiary.

It was while the second jury was being selected, Kent said, that he heard lists of names checked for sympathy toward American business interests.

In expanding the recommendation to "change chiefs" Kent accused Gov. Blanton Winship with "being greatly interested in converting the moats of Morro Castle into beautiful flower gardens" during political turmoil in the island.

The artist described the message in his mural as the sort of statement Patrick Henry would have sent. The mural depicts transmission of a message from a group of Eskimos to the people of Puerto Rico, encouraging them to fight for independence.

Meanwhile, the Postoffice Department yesterday asked Kent to submit a message in English to replace his inscription on the disputed postoffice mural, "Delivery of the Mails." The mural hangs in the new Postoffice Building.

The message, supposedly written by an Alaskan to a Puerto Rican, suggests that the two peoples "change chiefs" because "that alone can make us free." The message and the painting raised a storm of protest from Alaskan and Puerto Rican officials.

One Puerto Rican said Kent attempted to make his people appear "a bunch of African bushmen." Delegate Dimond, of Alaska, said the message made the Eskimos "look like rebels."

W. E. Reynolds, acting director of procurement, informed Dimond the request for a new message had been made.

Funeral Is Set For F. J. Heney, Foe of Graft

Son of Man He Slew to Be Pallbearer at Prosecutor's Rites Tomorrow.

Santa Monica, Calif., Nov. 1 (AP).—Funeral services for Francis Joseph Heney, 78, "two-fisted" prosecutor of San Francisco's celebrated graft cases of 1908, will be held Wednesday.

Heney, who died yesterday of influenza complications, had been a superior judge in Los Angeles County since 1932.

Appointed special Federal prosecutor at Portland, Oreg., in 1903, Heney obtained conviction of a United States district attorney and an Oregon Senator on charges of attempting to defraud the Government in land grants.

Three years later he prosecuted the mayor and other city officials of San Francisco on bribery charges. Hiram Johnson called his work "marvelous." During the case he was shot through the neck. Morris Haas, accused of the shooting, later was found dead in his cell. A pistol lay nearby.

Among the pallbearers at the funeral will be John C. Handy, son of a Tucson, Ariz., physician whom Heney shot to death in a dispute arising from his decision to handle a divorce suit against the physician. A coroner's jury exonerated Heney.

Handy, reared by his mother, held no malice for the man who killed his father and a deep friendship developed between him and Heney. He was a visitor at Heney's Santa Monica home yesterday shortly before the latter's death.

Requiem Mass Set For W. W. Hough

Requiem mass for William W. Hough, 41, butter merchant who died Sunday, will be held at 9 a. m. tomorrow in the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, Sixteenth street and Park road northwest, following brief services at 8:30 a. m. at the residence, 1409 Crittenden street northwest. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mr. Hough was owner of the butter firm of P. V. Hough & Son, founded by his grandfather in 1848, with headquarters in the Western Market, Twenty-first and K streets northwest. He had directed the business since his father's death several years ago.

He leaves two sisters, Mrs. A. H. Kammerer and Mrs. Charles Rhodes, both of Washington.

J. G. Dement Dies; In Trade 20 Years

John G. Dement, 70, owner of a grain and feed business at the old Center Market for many years, died yesterday at his home, 1407 Shepherd street northwest, after a brief illness.

Born in White Plain, Md., Mr. Dement was in the feed business for more than 20 years until closing of the Center Market. Recently he had been employed with the Smith Storage Co.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Clara V. Dement, and a daughter, Mrs. E. L. Fletcher, both of Washington.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow from the residence. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Burial Rites Conducted For J. Harris Franklin

Funeral services for J. Harris Franklin, 57, insurance dealer, who died Saturday night, were held yesterday at his home, 1729 Nineteenth street northwest. The Rev. George Bland Tucker, rector of St. John's Church, Georgetown, officiated. Burial followed in the Quaker Cemetery, West River, Md.

Pallbearers were Forbes Colhoun, William H. Murray and William Hall, all of West River; John Brewer, Philip M. Knox, Frank R. Strunk and Henry B. Clagett, all of Washington, and John Lansdale, of Houston, Tex.

That grandpa of all the new deals of the twentieth century, Mr. H. G. Wells, is in the Capital to give his pupils a review and a shot-gun quiz on the latest styles in Utopia. Government half-holidays have been declared for less. Maybe the credit—or the blame—for the New Deal should go to Mr. Wells.

* * * *

Most of the new dealers must have been weaned, as I was, on the books of Mr. Wells. He had an insidious way of getting you into his clutches, in your teens, with books like "The Time Machine" and "In the Days of the Comet," which seemed harmless enough.

* * * *

When he wrote "The First Men in the Moon" he must have had a prophetic premonition of the second coming of Roosevelt . . . Some of the New Dealers' adventures are oddly reminiscent of the Wellsian heroes who could leap 100 feet at a bound in that planet's rarefied atmosphere, where the inhabitants had the physical consistency of tomatoes.

"—first men in the moon."

By the time you had waded through Mr. Wells' tales of time and space you were ready for anything, even sterner fare . . . You probably jotted down the titles of all the books his heroes read before they could become Wellsian heroes, and after you had read them, too, you became a fairly thoroughgoing Wellsian.

* * * *

You were enchanted, as I was, by the deplorable interplay of noble ideas and body love . . . It made great reading . . . I pored over "Joan and Peter" and "Mr. Britling Sees It Through" in France, during the war that was to bring on Utopia, feeling a little bit like Peter, and yearning for a girl like Joan.

* * * *

One of the high moments in my education came when high-minded Joan, rallying Peter on his passing fancy for a gaudy blonde, demanded "What has she got that I haven't got?" . . .

It was almost my first inkling that an intelligent, high-minded girl may also be blessed with every endowment I had deemed to be the monopoly of the gumdrop sirens. An important discovery, for which I thank Mr. Wells

* * * *

Then, after whetting our appetites with all the dear moonstruck books, Tonobungay and Ann Veronica and the rest, Mr. Wells lured us into tougher going after the war, in his Outline of History, with its magnificent chapter on Napoleon, a requiem for all dictators . . .

* * * *

Mr. Wells invented a new type of selfless public administrator, nearly but not quite sexless, too . . . They were almost beyond good and evil—well, at any rate, beyond evil, except when some enticing female happened to find them in a mood of pessimism or exaltation, or some mood in between.

"—grandpa of the new dealers."

By the time the high school and college sophomores who had read about these selfless, sexless public servants had grown up and were ready to be a least selfless, the New Deal was ready for them.

They flocked to Washington, a thousand little H. G. Wellses ready to plan a thousand little Utopias, ready to stub their toes on a million human reactions.

Probably they all have felt, in moments of frustration, after a bad night, like Mr. Britling: "What a miserable, inefficient little Britling I am!" . . . At any rate, I hope so, for Utopias must be built in a mood of humility.

* * * *

I imagine President Roosevelt and most of his left-hand men, and Tommy Corcoran and Ben Cohen and Jerome Frank and Senator La Follette, and thousands of others around Washington must have read H. G. Wells in their youth . . .

Home-cooked meals make a room seem like home

Not all room-hunters "eat three out a day." Many prefer a home that offers home-cooked meals. Mrs. M. W. had a vacancy last week and inserted this ad in The Post Room and Board column—

within the second day, a Post reader rented the room and made his home at 1829 G St. Whether you offer room-and-board or simply a nice room—a Post Ad will find a tenant for you. Call Miss Rose—

Dupont Civic Body Favors Under Pass

$300,000 Project Model Will Be on Display This Month.

General approval of the proposed Dupont Circle underpass was expressed yesterday at a meeting attended by more than 50 members of the Dupont Circle Citizens Association.

After hearing Col. Dan I. Sultan, District Commissioner, explain the project, the association referred the question to the executive committee.

Col. Sultan said the underpass, necessiating removal of but three or four trees, would not affect the appearance of the circle. The entrance to the underpass would be in Connecticut avenue, 250 feet south of the circle, while traffic would emerge on the other side south of Q street.

New officers installed yesterday include Woodson P. Houghton, president, succeeding Demarest Lloyd who died in August; William Floyd Crosby, first vice president, and Dr. Harry A. Garfield, son of President James A. Garfield, second vice president. W. Herbert Gill continues as treasurer.

Forest Hill Citizens

Joining hands with the Daughters of the American Revolution and the Sons of the American Revolution in their fight to obtain an official flag for the District, members of the Forrest Hills Citizens Association last night appointed a special committee to co-operate with the two organizations.

At a meeting of the association last night in the Ben Murch School, members agreed that the District was entitled to equal standing with the 48 States and territorial possessions of the United States, all of which have officials flags. Mrs. Leslie Wright was appointed chairman of the special committee.

Following a report submitted by Mrs. Wilbur LaRoe, jr., pertaining to lack of playground facilities for Chevy Chase and vicinity, members voted to request District Commissioners for funds with which to erect a recreational stadium.

Edward Carter, chairman of the licenses in the community, reduce issuance of alcoholic beverage licenses in the community. He reported that he had been assured by Commissioner Hazen that efforts were now being made to decrease the number of beverage licenses from the present figure of 400 to a maximum of 300.

Manor Park Citizens

Request for a $900,000 appropriation necessary for completion of a new senior high school at Fifth and Sheridan streets northwest will be submitted to the District Budget Bureau in the near future, Ernest H. Pullman, secretary of the Manor Park Citizens' Association, announced last night following a meeting of the group at Whittier School.

The association adopted a resolution protesting a recent proposal by the Commissioners that the Old Tuberculosis Hospital at Fourteenth and Upshur streets northwest be used for an annex to Gallinger Hospital. The resolution urged instead that the ground be used for a new teacher's college or recreational purposes.

Optimism Prevails

Georgetown Progressive

They also voted to request chairmen of the House and Senate District Committees to adhere to the 1922 legislation providing for the maintenance of a 60-40 ratio of Federal contributions to the District government.

A special committee was appointed by Mrs. Henry W. Draper, president, to make a complete study of alley conditions in Georgetown.

Robert Dougan, of the Capital Transit Co., spoke on transportation needs and outlined plans for improved service.

Citizens of Takoma, D.C.

Members of the Citizens Association of Takoma, D. C., last night adopted a resolution opposing the proposal that the power of appointment of members to the School Board be taken away from the District Court and be placed in the hands of the Commissioners.

Meeting in the Takoma Public Library, members also went on record as opposing the plan whereby express buses would be routed along Ninth street instead of the present route on Thirteenth street.

Body Helpless To Meet Heat, Doctors Find

Behaves Differently in 3 Temperature Zones, Cornell Man Says.

By Gerald G. Gross

The Navy's best medical minds assembled here last night to hear fresh evidence in support of Mark Twain's famous observation, slightly paraphrased, namely, that everyone talks about the heat, but no one can do anything about it.

Lecturing at the Naval Medical School, Dr. Eugene F. DuBois, of Cornell University Medical School, submitted results of experiments conducted by Dr. James D. Hardy and himself, showing that:

1. The human body is susciptible to three temperature "zones," in each of which it behaves differently.

2. The forehead is the most sensitive part of the body, an experimental subject being able to perceive as slight a temperature change as three-thousandths of 1 degree centigrade when applied to that part.

Don't Worry on Cold Feet."

3. The most important factor in cooling off is heat radiation.

4. If you suffer from cold feet and cold toes, it isn't necessarily anything to become alarmed about, considering the relatively great distance of those extremties from the body's "central heating plant."

Dr. DuBois, a captain in the Naval Reserve, showed in effect that, marvelous as may be the machine that is the human body, it is helpless as far as "equalizing" itself against outside temperature changes is concerned. One may, of course, put on or take off clothes, turn off or turn off electric fans, eat more or fewer heat-producing foods, etc., but that's something else.

For his purpose, Dr. DuBois was interested in the—er—naked body. He came right out and told last night's learned audience that Dr. Hardy and himself had to strip themselves bare and enter a calorimeter—a cabinet affair that looks not unlike a Drinker respirator—to find out that the "warm zone" is 90 to 95 degrees, the "comfort zone" between 83 and 90 and the "cold zone from 83 down. This is with all clothing removed, remember.

Dr. DuBois's distinguished listeners—among them were Dr. Ross T. McIntire, physician to President Roosevelt; Commandant Charles S. Butler of the Naval Medical Center; Capt. Harold W. Smith, commanding officer of Naval Medical School; Dr. George W. McCoy, Public Health Service germ-detective, and many others—all listened politely until the speaker said something about a fan being impotent when the air temperature is as warm as the skin's.

Fan Fans Skeptical.

This bit of heresy elicited a wave of head wagging and even a few vocal challenges.

"Where did you place that fan?" asked Navy Surgeon General P. S. Rossiter incredulously.

He was assured that Dr. DuBois had it smack in front of him. Admiral Rossiter thought that was right strange and so did several other skeptics.

The visiting speaker conceded that an electric fan, used under the forementioned conditions, might have a beneficial psychological effect. Also, if the humidit: was excessive, a fan might help cool one off by promoting vaporization (perspiration), he added.

Body Heat 103 All Right.

Dr. DuBois pointed out that the athlete may develop a temperature of 103 degrees without discomfort, citing the experiment in which a squash player reached that stage after 36 minutes at the game. This occurred in spite of the fact that the subject was continuously eliminating heat by sweating, radiation and convection.

In the "comfort zone," the body gives off heat as fast as it is produced, he said. In the "cold zone," with only a minmum of blood being sent to the skin by the heart, the loss of heat by radiation is so great that the body has to turn on the shivers as a compensatory factor.

A. F. G. E. Lodge to Meet.

General Land Office Lodge, No. 153, American Federation of Government Employes, will meet today at 4:35 p. m. in the mails and files division of the General Land Office. Nominations will be received for officers, delegates and exegutive committee members at the December meeting and elections will be held at the meeting in January.

Business Men Move Toward United Front

4 Societies Tentatively Pledge to Join League Against Privilege Tax.

A league of professional and business men's organizations to exert united influence on Congressional and local authorities in all financial matters relating to the District took form last night in a meeting at the Hotel Hamilton.

General outlines of the "united front," which is being whipped into shape primarily to fight the business privilege tax, were approved at the conference by representatives of 17 organizations.

Delegates from four of the 17 societies gave definite indication their organizations would join the league, while most of the others are expected to report at the next meeting November 10. Those provisionally accepting were the Federation of Business Men's Associations, the Motion Picture Theater Owners Association, whose president, A. Julian Brylawski, was chairman of the conference; the Liquor Dealers Association and the Portia Club.

Styled the "District Council on Municipal Administration," the embryo union is intended, in the words of the preamble as accepted last night, "to promote efficiency and economy in the organization and management of the government of the District of Columbia; to prevent waste and unwise expenditures of the taxpayers' money, and to guard against excessive, unfair and unwise taxation; to endeavor to advise congressional committees as to the needs of Washington and its business men; to demand a voice before the several budgetary committees of the District, and to so conduct its efforts as to demand recognition by Congress; to formulate and promote an equitable tax system for the citizens of Washington; . . . and to secure an increase in the Federal apropriation for the District."

In a further declaration of policy adopted by the conferees, emphasis was placed on the full retention of identity of all organizations that might join the union.

According to the proposals agreed upon last night, which were presented to the conference by a committee of seven, the council is to consist of a forum of three delegates from each member society and a board of governors, one from each member, to be chosen from the forum. The board is designed to handle questions of administration and detail, while the forum will determine policy. The council is to be an incorporated body.

Metropolis View

An end to the granting of paroles to second offenders was demanded last night by the Metropolis View Citizens Association in a resolution adopted at a meeting at Noyes School.

Mrs. W. M. Flinchum and Mrs. Richard J. Purcell, association secretary and president of the Brookland Noyes Parent-Teacher Association, were delegated to cary the organizations's demands for a new graded school in the area to officials of the school organization.

Congress Heights

Otho Garnand was re-elected president of the Progressive Citizens Association of Congress Heights at a meeting last night in the Congress Heights Baptist Church, Esther and Brothers Places, southeast.

Also re-elected were Edward M. Richardson, vice president; treasurer, and Mrs. Edna Hoag, secretary. Plans were discussed for the raising of local relief fund by general subscription.

It was agreed to ask for the universal installation of water meters in the Congres Heights district. After hearing an address by Harry Stull, president of the District Suffrage Association, the members voted endorsement of the movement.

Michigan Park Citizens.

Resolutions opposing new taxes for the District and praising the Police Department were adopted last night by the Michigan Park Citizens Association, meeting in Bunker Hill School.

The association went on record as "absolutely opposed" to any form of new taxes and as urging the Federation of Citizens Associations to insist that the Federal Government be made to pay its share of the cost of operation of the District government.

Old Math Puzzle of 15 Girls Explained for Club at G. W. U.

The story of the 15 school girls, and how the problem of shuffling them for a daily walk amost drove mathematicians crazy, was told last night by Dr. Michael Goldberg, an engineer in the Navy Department, at a meeting of the Columbia Math Club at George Washington University.

In 1850, the Rev. T. P. Kirkman, a Scotch clergyman, whose hobby was mathematics, posed the problem. He had a school-marm friend in whose class were 15 girls. Now, she had a habit of taking the young ladies for a walk each day. They walked in groups of threes.

The problem resolved itself in determining a week's program for the students whereby on consecutive days no one girl would walk with the same girls with whom she had walked the previous days.

In this way, the teacher decided, the students would become acquainted with each other more rapidly.

For example, on the first day, the following students were grouped in this manner: 1, 2, 3—4, 5, 6—7, 8, 9—10, 11, 12—and 13, 14, 15. Then the arrangement had to be broken up so that no combination had walked together.

Dr. Goldberg said that a solution appeared in 1863. However, he added, it was not settled conclusively until 1917, when Peter Mulder, using the problem as the basis for a doctor's thesis at the Groningen University, offered 70 different solutions.

Consisting of 15 small round pills, numbered from 1 to 15 and connected with one another by a series of seven linear links, the model gave the various combinations of the solution.

The Mulder solution of the problem has been neglected since the publication, Dr. Goldberg stated, but it will be mentioned in future mathematics books, he added.

U. S. Race Lines Will Disappear, Educator Says

Intense Class Movements Will Merge Interests, Association Told.

Class movements of such intensity as to cause racial lines to vanish in America were predicted last night by Dr. W. Lloyd Warner, of the University of Chicago, who spoke at sessions of the National Association for Study of Negro Life and History, held yesterday in the Garnet-Patterson auditorium, incident to the annual meeting of that body.

Dr. Warner, discussing "The Negro in the American Social Hierarchy," traced developments of class interests within the group of a nature identical with those in other racial groups in this country, and indicated how the intensifying of class struggle produces parallel groups among various sections of the populace, out of which a merger of interests causes racial lines to disappear.

Members were conducted on a tour of colored schools earlier by Dr. Howard H. Long, assistant superintendent. They also visited various higher institutions of learning within and adjacent to the District.

The American Negro's background was discussed by Dr. N. N. Puckett, of Western Reserve University, and Dr. George Herzog, of Columbia, the former evaluating the liquid qualities of syllables in Negro names and their significance in racial cultural development, and the latter presenting studies of Negro life in Liberia.

An editor's breakfast will be held this morning at the Phyllis Wheatley Young Womens Christian Association. Problems of an editor of a scientific magazine will be discussed. Documents in the history of the Negro will be discussed this afternoon by Dr. Thomas P. Martin, of the Library of Congress, Dr. Carl L. Lokke, of the National Archives, and Dr. Arthur Schomburg. The night session will discuss neglected aspects of Negro history, and various prizes will be awarded. Sessions will be held in the Garnet-Patterson auditorium.

Cuba to Decorate Mrs. Roosevelt

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and three others will be decorated Thursday by the Cuban Red Cross in "recognition of distinguished Red Cross service," it was announced last night.

Mrs. Roosevelt will receive the decoration of the Order of the Grand Cross from the Cuban Ambassador, Pedro Martinez Fraga, in a ceremony at the White House at noon. Attending will be Lieut. Col. Evelio Figarola y Infante of Havana, general secretary of the Cuban Red Cross, Dr. Miguel A. Macau of the society and Maj. Luis Fernandez Ardois, aid to Lieut. Col. Figarola.

The others to be decorated at 3 p. m. in the office of Admiral Cary T. Grayson, Red Cross chairman, are James L. Fieser, Mrs. James K.McClintock and Miss Antoinette E. Hardisty.

Blood Requested For Traffic Victim

Doctors at the University of Virginia Hospital last night issued an appeal to friends of J. F. Sullivan, one of four Washingtonians injured in an auto crash near Charlottesville Saturday night, to offer their blood for transfusions necessary to save his life.

Sullivan, a plumber employed by A. P. Bovello at 3330 Georgia avenue northwest, suffered severe internal injuries when the car he occupied with Mr. and Mrs. William Craghead, their eight-month-old daughter and Fred Atkins, all of Washington, failed to make a turn about 2 miles from Charlottsville.

Atkins and Craghead suffered severe lacerations about the face. Shiffiett suffered minor cuts and bruises. The baby escaped injury.

Pay Boost Sought For Service Men

In an effort to make "service in the armed forces more attractive to young men," the Army and Navy Union will sponsor a Congressional measure to increase the basic pay of enlisted men of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and the Coast Guard, it was announced yesterday following a meeting at the Willard Hotel of the national legislative and welfare committee.

Conferees adopted that course after a discussion of the German-American Bund.

The Big Apple Flowers Here, But It's a Tree

But it's not the kind of apple you're thinking of. Disregarding a calendar which insists this is November, a flourishing apple tree in Campbell's back yard has sprouted bright new green leaves and even has burst forth with a few blossoms.

Up to last week, the tree, which was planted two decades ago by Campbell, had had a bad year. Bearing practically no fruit this fall, it lost its leaves, as usual. Then came Indian summer, and with it new leaves, new blossoms—and new fruit, maybe.

Campbell, who next month will complete his thirtieth year in government service, knows a good deal about apple trees, because he worked on a Maryland farm as a boy. Besides the freak tree, he has raspberries and a little grape arbor in his back yard. But that's nothing compared to the vegetable garden he used to grow there. "Enough to keep my whole family durin' the summer," he says.

Even though his farming is on a reduced scale now, he still has his troubles. "Jes' as soon as the apples are big enough for the kids around here to see 'em they climb in here and give me a fit."

At the Patent Office, where everyone knows Campbell and knows about his tree, they say "it must be a Democratic tree, because it only blossoms on the South side." Asked about his political predilections, Campbell, whose house is at 729 Kenyon street, diplomatically replies, "I'm a District resident. I have no vote."

2 Persons Hurt In Auto Mishaps

Levine suffered a possible fractured skull and arm and severe cuts and bruises. He was taken to Walter Reed Hospital.

Helen Coker, colored, 15, of 1137 Sumner road southeast, suffered minor cuts when she was struck by a car at Seventh street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. She was treated at Emergency Hospital.

Citizens Create Permanent Unit For Lunch Fund

Committee to Broaden and Perpetuate Program in District.

As a means of perpetuating and broadening its program, the Citizens Emergency Committee for Feeding Hungry Children last night dissolved and was reorganized as the Citizens' Permanent Committee for Feeding and Clothing Needy School Children. Mrs. John Boyle, jr., remains chairman.

In addition to members of the original committee, the permanent group will include Mgr. John A. Ryan, director of the social action department of the National Catholic Welfare Council; Judge Isaac R. Hitt, formerly of Police Court; A. Coulter Wells, Charles F. Burton, president of the City Bank; Mrs. Charles R. Shelton and Mrs. Dewey Zirkin.

Details of the extended program will be decided on today. The committee expects to launch a new campaign for the required funds.

Meanwhile, the week-long series of magic shows at the Belasco Theater opened yesterday with marked success. Nearly 1,400 children jammed the theater for the matinee. The evening performance attracted a slightly smaller crowd. Proceeds from the shows, which will be held twice daily through Saturday, will go to the lunch fund.

The committee has announced the names of the firemen who sold the most tickets for the recent benefit boxing carnival. Private W. S. Boss, of Engine Company No. 2, will receive $50 for selling 1,700 tickets. His record was nearly twice that of the second prize winner, Private Elwood Graham, of Engine Company No. 31, who sold 908 tickets and will receive $25.

So far, $11,000 has been turned over to the District WPA for purchase of food. The committee expects to have available additional funds near the end of the week. Reports are expected shortly from the District Parent-Teacher Association, which sponsored a benefit lecture October 22, and from Chairman E. E. Harrington of the Inter-American Horse Show food concession.

Luncheon Will Honor 'Hank' Brundage, Jr.

At its luncheon today at 12:30 p. m. at the Raleigh Hotel the Advertising Club of Washington will celebrate the birthday of H. M. "Hank" Brundage, jr., general sales manager of the Washington Gas Light Co. Tonight from 5:30 to 6:30 o'clock the club will hold a reception for Brundage in its rooms in the Raleigh.

Wilmot R. Squier, club president, will preside at the luncheon and will present the guest of honor at the reception. Brundage has been a record breaker in sales, both here and elsewhere, in his field.

Central Labor Union Approves Study of Strike Co-operation

Delegates to the Central Labor Union, meeting in Typographical Hall, 423 G street northwest, last night adopted a resolution setting up a special conference to formulate recommendations for more effective co-operation of member unions with units on strike.

Disputes recently have arisen over cases where union members of one craft continued to work for employers who were being picketed by unionists in other crafts.

The conference will be composed of one delegate from each union accredited to the central labor body, the executive board, the legislative committee, the contract committee and the "unfair list" committee.

The meeting last night heard a report from John Locher, president of the Central Union, who represented Washington at the recent A. F. L. convention in Denver. Locher said, "The A .F. of L. is growing by leaps and bounds, but the days of the C. I. O. are numbered."

He also described great activity at Denver among representatives of United States Government employes.

The legislative committee of the Central Labor Union was authorized to meet with the A. F. L. legislative conference before Congress opens to discuss the proposed wages and hours bill.

Herbert L. Willett, director of the Community Chest, addressed the meeting, and after brief debate the Chest campaign was indorsed.

The committee on arrangements reported preparations were almost complete for the union label exhibit and carnival November 18-19 in Pythian Hall Temple, 1012 Ninth street northwest.

Boys Admit Epidemic of False Alarms

District firemen rejoiced and District police believed they had found the source of a recent epidemic of false alarms here with the arrest yesterday of two boys, one 12 years old and the other 14, on opposite sides of the city.

Thirteen proved unlucky for a 12-year-old colored boy last night and quite the opposite for a rookie policeman filling his first assignment by watching the firebox on Nineteenth street at the Washington Auditorium, from which 13 alarms, 12 false, had emanated in 45 days. The policeman, Private M. C. Barcoe of the Third Precinct, said he was watching the box from a hiding place in the auditorium when he saw a colored boy carrying a basket saunter up to the alarm.

The boy, he said, looked about him cautiously, pulled the box and ran with the policeman in hot pursuit. After several laps around the auditorium, the boy was caught and taken to the Third Precinct station. There, according to police, he said he lived in the 2200 block Twelfth street northwest and confessed sending in "some but not all" of the 13 false alarms.

Firemen See Capture.

Firemen of Engine Company 23 at 2119 G street northwest, who have been run dizzy by false alarms from the auditorium box, arrived in time to see Barcoe's captive and went happily back to their station.

The ringing of 20 false alarms from fire boxes in the last three years and the starting of three real fires was admitted yesterday, according to Fire Department inspectors, by a 14-year-old. Two of the fires were set by the lad in his home and his school, respectively, the inspectors said, and the other in the 900 block of G street southwest.

The boy, whose name is withheld in accordance with The Post's policy, lives with his father. His mother is dead. The false alarms were all rung and the fires started in the Fourth Police Precinct.

Was Held for Theft.

Policemen J. M. Bell and B. M. Caussin arrested the boy last week on the charge that he snatched a coin carrier containing $12.65 from a bus driver. A chance remark by him led the authorities to hold him at the receiving home while they questioned him along lines that resulted yesterday in the confession.

The Fire Department inspectors said the boy showed a detailed knowledge of the location and numbers of fire alarm boxes in the Fourth Precinct that would have done credit to a fireman. His recollection of the times when he rang the false alarms, although they covered a period of three years, coincided almost exactly, the questioners said, with the Fire Department's records.

The boy is alleged to have confessed starting a fire in September in the Anthony Bowen School on Second street, corner of M street southwest. He said he ignited the contents of some wastebaskets which he emptied in the school's basement, but that the janitor soon discovered the fire and extinguished it.

The fire in the boy's home was set in August of this year, the inspectors said, and the third blaze was touched off in August, 1936. Details of these two fires were withheld.

The boy will probably be arraigned today in Juvenile Court.

'Ability' Standard For Civil Service Jobs Is Advocated

A press agent's job in the Department of Labor "that Charlie Michelson himself would have been unqualified to fill," was described last night by E. Claude Babcock, national president of the United Civil Service Employes, at a meeting of the general council of that organization at 914 G street northwest.

Applicants, said Babcock, were required to have a college degree "with specialized training in journalism and the arts."

Babcock, a former secretary of the Civil Service Commission, said he favored abolition of all arbitrary qualifications for civil service jobs and the awarding of appointments on "a basis of ability alne."

He also described the case of a man who worked for the Government from August 20 to October 20, including overtime, only to be told there would be no pay for him because the commission had not approved his appointment.

2-Alarm Fire Destroys Market Merchandise

A two-alarm fire destroyed several thousand dollars worth of merchandise in the Food Fair Market at 1420 Seventh street northwest, last night.

Distinguished by one of those rare coalitions of pithy and pungent writing, keenly sensitive direction and flawless interpretation that happen too infrequently in the theater, "Tovarich" last night made clear to a brilliant and enthusiastic audience in the National why it captivated New York and ran for 11 months on Broadway.

To the enlivenment of his two acts and four scenes, Jacques Deval, author of the original French version of the play, contributed a penetrating sense of humor, a sympathetic approach to the predicament of the royal Russian emigre, exiled in a foreign land, and a discreet avoidance of the controversial aspects of a subject that necessarily strikes close to the hearts of the remnants of Czaristic White Russia and the Soviet. With a deftness that does high credit both to his perception and his skill as a playwright of the first order, Robert E. Sherwood has perpetuated the full forcefulness of the comedy by preserving those qualities of wit, pathos and telling climax created by his adroit contemporary.

Is Swift and Direct.

The movement of the story is simple, swift and direct. It traces the experience of a former grand duchess and her princely husband, who are reduced to accepting menial employment in the home of a rich bourgeoise banker in Paris, the one as maid, the other butler. Superior in every quality of mind, heart and breeding to their masters, Grand Duchess Tatiana Petrovna and Prince Mikail Alexandrovitch Ouratieff create a situation in the establishment of the nouveau riche Duponts as revolutionary as the Red uprising that brought about their flight from their native land. From figures under something more than a subconscious veil of suspicion, they become the cherished servitors of their employers. Then guests are invited to dinner, guests of financial and political note who have far-reaching schemes for the acquisition of rich oil concessions in Russia. All have had dealings of one sort or another with the maid and butler when they were high in the councils of their country, and all are in quest of the 4,000,000,000 francs intrusted to the personal safekeeping of Prince Mikail.

Out of this unconscious contretemps has been evolved a climacteric last act that becomes momentarily a splendid exposition of the most exalted patriotism, loyalty to country and to self and fidelity to a sacred trust. By a happy and logical denouement, "Tovarich" reverts to its gay humor and ends on a joyous note.

Cast Admirably Balanced.

For the portrayal of the pivotal characters in this perfect example of high comedy, Gilbert Miller has assembled an impeccable cast, led by Marta Abba and Rudolf Forster, both new and welcome additions to the list of players Washington must look upon henceforth as favorites. Both Miss Abba and Mr. Forster, the one Italian, the other Viennese—bring to their roles equally fine revelations of the mature development of the art of acting.

Those in the less important assignments—and none is negligible in the rounded perfection of the play—add their full quota of merit to a work that brings new luster to the Capital's season of superlative "theater."

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Noted Screen Star and Her Producer Visit Capital From Britain and Meet Members of the Local Press

Anna Neagle and Herbert Wilcox Come to Washington for Premiere of 'Victoria the Great;' Variety Scores With Serio-Comic Luncheon; Those M-G-M Shorts; Mr. Callender Goes Calling; Theater Notes.

IT is an arduous and a hurried schedule that has been laid out for Anna Neagle, the distinguished young British actress who stars in "Victoria the Great," and Herbert Wilcox, producer of the deeply impressive film record of the 60-year reign of Queen Victoria, opening on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater tonight.

BELL.

Having spent five days in three Canadian cities, the week-end in New York, and the early days of the present week in Washington, they are called upon next to make similarly rushed and crowded visits to a long list of other representative American centers, leading eventually to Hollywood and the center of film production in this country. Notwithstanding this exhausting demand upon their physical and nervous energies, these two noted visitors betray to those fortunate enough to become at all acquainted with them only the most enthusiastic appreciation of the attentions being shown them on this side.

This was graciously impressed upon the Washington press and other invited guests in the Presidential suite at the Willard Hotel yesterday afternoon, when the merry-go-round activities of a crowded day were not permitted to dim or dull their cordial response to a barrage of intimate and endlessly repeated questions in a not-too-impertinent curiosity and answered with a courteous and charming candor.

Miss Neagle, one learned, played the title role in "Victoria the Great" with immense personal relish, but with a sense of enormous responsibility. Impersonating a beloved sovereign of her own people to the satisfaction of her royal children and grandchildren still living, as well as to the entertainment demands of the theatergoing public, presented a problem of some dimensions. That the star accomplished it with such consummate skill that not a scene or an inch of film was deleted from the finished picture is evidence enough of Miss Neagle's deep understanding and full grasp of the art to which she dedicates her talents.

It is further remarkable that so comprehensive and far-flung a narrative should have been filmed in only seven and a half weeks of actual "shooting" time—five weeks on interiors and two and a half on exteriors. This reflects something of the perspicacity and efficiency of Herbert Wilcox, who was both producer and director of the film.

Neither of the visitors has ever participated in the fabrication of an American-made screen production. For this there is a definite and a potent reason. The English studios—and this will fall as an amazing circumstance upon American ears—boasts only three feminine stars of the first rank. They are Miss Neagle, Jessie Matthews and Gracie Fields. Similarly, British producers realize that they cannot compete with Hollywood in the American market unless they place a high entertainment value upon the works they release for world consumption. For this reason, they have conserved their resources to as great a degree as possible and have bent their energies toward the production of pictures that will embody universal public appeal and still preserve a distinctly British flavor. "Victoria the Great" is foremost among the London-made pictures that fulfill these requirements.

Neither Miss Neagle nor Mr. Wilcox ever has visited Washington before, although both have been visitors to this country numerous times in the past. They give the impression not so much of being "show people" as a lady and gentleman of acute mental perception, a literate and articulate grasp of world viewpoint and rich cultural background.

The charm of their personalities and the fine attainments they have achieved as persons are reflected in the substantial and well-grounded worth of the contributions they have made to the progress of the cinema. Especially is this true of "Victoria the Great."

Yesterday's luncheon of the Variety Club of Washington, in the small ballroom of the Willard, took its place on the high level with the most enjoyable the organization of showmen has sponsored. It was under the one-day joint kingship of Dr. Frank T. Shyne and "Bill" Dolph, of Radio Station WOL, and was designated a "radio luncheon," for reasons that are a little obscure—unless it was because radio receiving sets were awarded as door prizes to those who arrived on time. Charles Kurtzman, manager of Loew's Capitol Theater, by reason of holding the first of the winning numbers, fell victim to the most amusing "gag" of the day when he thought he had won a set of champagne glasses—just what the Kurtzman household needs. Just as the bellhop serving as delivery boy was about to hand him the crystal-laden tray, he "slipped" and splattered glassware all over Mr. Somerville's polished floor. When Charlie was told that the real prize was the radio set, he didn't dare touch it for fear it would explode in his face! Pranksters, these Variety barkers. But the piece de resistance of the occasion was Bob Horton's informative and warning talk on what lies behind the war headlines, from the rational point of view of an admitted isolationist, but nonetheless forceful on that account. Overwhelming hits were scored by Jane Pickens and Harry Rose, from the Capitol, in songs, with Burrus Williams at the piano, and Walter Johnson got a great hand with a few words at the loudspeaker. Another luncheon in the same hostelry which ran over the Variety time limit prevented the attendance of Miss Neagle and Mr. Wilcox, star and producer of "Victoria the Great."

Having achieved a pre-eminent place among the world's foremost producers of feature pictures, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer now comes to bat with a handsomely gotten-up piece of plate-paper propaganda on its short subjects. It is a plate-paper group of personalities and attractions that this profusely illustrated brochure celebrates—Robert Benchley, Pete Smith, "Crime Doen't Pay," a new bit of whimsy devoted to a picturization of the comic strip, "The Captain and the Kids," and all the rest.

It is evident from even a cursory examination of this illuminating "M-G-M Short Story" that as much painstaking care is being devoted to abbreviated screen subjects as to the fabrication of the major works that have brought such luster to the name of the producers who made "Grand Hotel," "Captains Courageous," "San Francisco," "Romeo and Juliet," "Dinner at Eight" and that long and distinguished list of releases to which "The Firefly," probably the best recorded of all the filmusicals, soon will add itself.

Robert Benchley's deft humor and Pete Smith's serio-comic explorations in all fields of pictorial endeavor are enough to dignify any short-reel schedule. Take a peek at "The Romance of Radium," at the Palace, or Bob Benchley's bit in the trailer on "Live, Love and Learn," at the Capitol, if you are among the Thomases who have a doubt.

• • • •

As if preview screenings of "Ali Baba Goes to Town," "Dead March" and "Live, Love and Learn," today and tomorrow, were not enough, the Warner Brothers are in diligent quest of a convenient hour at which they might squeeze in an advance squint at Marlene Dietrich's "Angel" for the boys and girls of the press. This should not be so difficult a task as it seems on the surface. Speaking exclusively for this column, for example, the hours from 4 to 6 a. m. are open practically any morning this week!

• • • •

Romaine Callender, an old Washington favorite with Steve Cochran's National Theater Players and the villainous parson with Charlotte Greenwood in "Leaning on Letty," at the National last week, was a welcome caller at the desk last week-end.

Mr. Callender is one of the canniest of the actors. While never in the high stellar salary brackets, he seldom is without an engagement and is one of the few in his profession who seems to know how to use his money to best advantage. If not rich, he is exceedingly well-to-do and is content to avail himself of the comparatively minor opportunities of the theater. For instance, last week was his sixty-eighth in the role he created when "Leaning on Letty" was a moderate New York hit as "Post Road."

Although never a "big name" on the screen, Mr. Callender has a fairish record to his credit as a performer before the cameras. To date he has been cast as a principal in 13 pictures and at the conclusion of his present engagement again is heading straight for Hollywood—unless something more advantageous springs up in the meantime. In addition to other considerations, he likes the southern Californian climate—as who doesn't? It was nice to have him drop by and hear all the pleasant things he had to say about Edward Arnold, one of his associates in the early National Players days.

• • • •

A great many interested Washingtonians will be watching the New York papers today and tomorrow. The Lunts opened in "Amphitryon 38" on Broadway last night, and "I'd Rather Be Right," starring George M. Cohan, opens in the Alvin Theater tonight. Mixed notices from the critics would be my guess on both—but then, I tried to guess a daily number once. Once was enough!

So-Now-You-Know Note.

A Young Queen Sits in State

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, Nov. 1.

BEAUTY DEPT.: In the forthcoming movie, "Fifty-second Street, Leo Carillo portrays Tony, one of the original speakeasy settlers on that street. Walter Wanger, producer of the movie, sent his attorney to Tony to get a release covering any claims for damages as a result of that portrayal. . . . The bearded Tony, about to sign, asked: "Will Carillo look just like me? Will he wear a beard?" . . . "Well, we wanted him to look like you," was the information, "but he refused to wear a beard." . . . "He'll look like me," Tony promised, went to the barber—and shaved off his beard!"

• • • •

CRIME DEPT.: When Al Brady, Public Enemy No. 1, was shot and killed in Bangor, Me., his body—and that of his henchman—remained untouched in the street for 45 minutes. The G-Men made no explanation of this . . . Here's the reason: The local officials and passersby all believed this was an exploitation stunt for a movie playing there—a movie entitled "Dead End."

• • • •

TRAVEL DEPT.: John Gunther, author of "Inside Europe," sails for Siam to get material for his new book. He went to the Siamese Consulate and received an official letter of introduction to a Minister in Siam. "Will that ease your worry?" the diplomats told him. . . . But it didn't ease Gunther's worries. The letter is in Siamese, and as yet he isn't sure whether it's a letter of introduction—or an order to shoot him.

• • • •

BUSINESS DEPT.: Abe Lyman just returned from Hollywood, where Jack Benny had urged him to remain. "Stay here," Benny pleaded. "You'll become the Clark Gable of the orchestra leaders." . . . "I want to go back to Broadway," Lyman returned, "Where I'm the Abe Lyman of the orchestra leaders."

• • • •

DRAMA DEPT.: The New Masses magazine, in a recent review of a WPA show presented here by the Federal Theater, panned the show unmercifully . . . The reviewer used a pen name. Actually, he's a WPA actor—playing the lead in that very same show.

• • • •

MUSIC DEPT.: A number of the dinner guests at Dempsey's complained to Jack that his band leader, Jan Brunesco, wasn't playing the swing-tunes advertised, but was annoying their ears with some Continental airs. . . . Dempsey went to the band leader and asked: "What's that you've been playing?" . . . "Caprice Vennois, Liebesfreud and Liebesleid," was the reply. . . . "Well, the customers want swing, don't they?" Dempsey queried. . . . "I now am playing for that one customer there," Brunesco pointed. . . . Dempsey looked and asked: "Who's he?" . . . "He's the composer of those songs," the conductor informed. "His name is Fritz Kreisler."

RADIO DEPT.: Within the next few days the National Broadcasting Company will announce the immediate construction of a brand-new studio in Hollywood to replace their current offices there. The present headquarters, they explain, are "outdated." . . . They were built exactly two years ago.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Nov. 1.—Idol Chatter: Madeleine Carroll first gained fame because of her beautiful legs, but she taboos pictures of them now—too bad! Look alikes: Gladys Swarthout and Bit-Player Lynne Browning. You hear a lot about the salaries paid big-shot stars—but most of them would gasp if they knew how much M-G-M pays Director Clarence Brown. Climbing up the comeback trail: Evelyn Brent—and Hollywood is cheering her on.

Having celebrated his fifteenth birthday, Master Searl wants it known that he prefers to be called Jack, not Jackie. Among Filmtown's swell people: Mary Boland—one of the few stars who really enjoys a good laugh on herself. Can't imagine why Paramount pays Benny Baker to act the clown—he would rather do it than eat. Apt simile: As hopeless as Max Baer's campaign to win a screen career. One sure way to suffer a complete nervous breakdown is to go for an automobile ride—with Bruce Cabot at the wheel.

Here is a little item addressed to those of you who think a screen star's life is a bed of roses. For two weeks, Claire Trevor — as conscientious an actress as could be found in all Hollywood — has been "cramming" to become letter perfect in her dialogue for a scheduled opus entitled "Big Town Girl." Last night, just before midnight, a messenger boy rang her doorbell and delivered a bulky scenario and a note from Darryl Zanuck. "Please report, in make-up, by 8 o'clock tomorrow morning for a part in 'Second Honeymoon,'" it ordered tersely. Claire spent the rest of the night memorizing lines for the new role, routed out a masseuse at dawn, and was on the set this morning at two minutes before 8. "Big Town Girl" has been indefinitely postponed.

REID WINS DECISION OVER INGRAM IN ARENA BOUT

This Morning

Future Looks Good for Redskin Gridmen

By Shirley Povich.

As long as matters in the National Professional League have shaped themselves along lines that presage a possible championship for Washington's Redskins it might not be amiss to investigate the remainder of the schedule and what it may hold.

POVICH.

At this writing, the Eastern division championship is a very definite two-team race between New York's Giants and the Redskins. Both teams have swung into the stretch of the campaign and are now head-and-head far in front of every other Eastern contender. It will be the Redskins or the Giants against the Chicago Bears when East meets West in the play-off game for the title.

* * * *

Barring a complete collapse, it will certainly be the Bears who will carry the Western banner into the play-off game. The Chicago Club has demonstrated its superiority over the rest of the West and after six games is still unbeaten. Their nearest challenger, the Green Bay Packers, show two defeats on their record.

The Redskins have four games remaining on the schedule and the Giants have five. But it apepars to this department that the remainder of the schedule favors the Washington Club. The Redskins meet only two of the league's strong teams—the Packers and the Giants in their remaining games, whereas the Giants will be risking defeat in three of their five remaining games.

* * * *

In succession the Redskins will face Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Green Bay and the Giants. The New York Club is forced to meet Pittsburgh, Detroit, Greenbay, Brooklyn and the Redskins in that order.

Very conceivably, the Eastern division title can hinge on the final game of the regular schedule—December 5, when the Redskins meet the Giants at the Polo Grounds. If the teams run to form, that game will decide the championship.

* * * *

But before they come up to the final game with the Giants, the Redskins will be meeting only one troublesome opponent—the Packers. The Giants, however, will be faced with beating both the Detroit Lions and the Packers before arriving at the game with the Redskins. Because of their easier schedule, the Redskins may still be battling for the Eastern title when they invade the Polo Grounds on December 5.

* * * *

Assuming that the Redskins will knock off both the Pittsburgh and Cleveland clubs and that the Giants will dispose of Brooklyn and Pittsburgh, the thing boils down to whatever success the Redskins may have against the Packers and the success of the Giants against the Packers and Lions.

* * * *

If perchance, the Redskins lose to the Packers and the Giants break even in their two frays with the Packers and Lions, the Redskins will still have a chance to win the Eastern title by beating the Giants. If the Giants win both of their tough games as well as the easier ones and the Redskins lose to the Packers, then the title will belong to the Giants no matter what the result of the final game in New York.

* * * *

But if the Giants lose to both the Packers and the Lions and the Redskins lose to the Packers on the way to the final game, the Eastern title will still be in the balance when the Giants and Redskins clash.

* * * *

The Redskins can insure themselves a terrific edge if they beat the Packers. In that event and supposing that the Giants break even against the Lions and Packers, the Redskins will invade the Polo Grounds on December 5 needing only a tie against the Giants to clinch the pennant.

* * * *

If it does, indeed, boil down to the final game between the Giants

Tech and Roosevelt, their lineups bolstered by release of the new advisory marks, will tangle this afternoon in an important inter-high football series game in the Roosevelt stadium.

Tech will be at full strength for the first time this year because Ivy Belote, 1936 all-High guard, ineligible the last advisory, has cleaned up his scholastic deficiencies, and is once again rarin' to go. Rusty Thompson, McKinley coach, said yesterday that Sharkey, as customary, will start the game at left guard, but that Belote will see plenty of action.

Roosevelt acquires two worthy reserves who have successfully passed the required number of subjects this advisory. They are Harry Gray, an experienced back, and Robert Floyd, a bruising tackle.

Crucial Point For Tech.

For Tech this game marks a crucial turning of the series because the T-Streeters are still a half game behind Eastern and need a victory today to deadlock the lead and set the stage for the Eastern-Tech game which is expected to definitely settle the title next Tuesday in Eastern stadium.

Tech will be heavily favored to

Amateur Union to Sift 136 New U. S. Marks

Meeting This Month to Decide Claims in Various Fields of Sports; Performances of Flanagan, Cunningham and Other Stars Involved.

By Stuart Cameron,
United Press Sports Editor.

New York, Nov. 1.—Smaller in number than in 1936 but correspondingly higher in quality, the o;cial list of sports records to be passed upon by the amateur athletic union in its annual convention this month was announced today.

While only 136 United States records are claimed this year as against 188 one year ago, the stand-out performances occurred in the more standard events such as the 300-meters, 800-meters, 2 miles, pole vault, high jump, and the like. The list was announced by Paul R. Jordan, chairman of the A. A. U. record committee.

Ralph Flanagan, of the Miami Biltmore Swimming Club, Florida, America's best free style swimmer, leads all athletes in record-breaking with a total of 15 tentative marks to his credit. Adolph Kiefer of the Lake Shore Athletic Club, Chicago, Olympic backstroke champion, and John Higgins of the Olneyville Boys Club, Providence, R. I., breast stroke star, were next in line, with five each.

The list does not embrace record performances of United States athletes in Europe last summer. It is confined to athletes who have broken records in the United States this year.

Glenn Cunningham, former Kansas flier, who now runs for the New York Curb Exchange A. C., is listed for two new records, 3:008 for the 1,320-yards, and 6:34 for the 1½-mile run.

Possibly the best marks up for approval are those of 1:49.6 for the 800-meter and 880-yards, credited to Elroy Robinson, of the Olympic Club, San Francisco. Another track star with two marks in prospect is Forrest (Spec) Towns, of the University of Georgia, who is credited with a time of 14.1 for the 110-meter and 120-yard high hurdles, made in 1936. The performances, studied last year, were held up for more information.

Two athletes were credited with identical records. They are Earle Meadows and Bill Sefton, both of the University of Southern California, who reached 14 feet 11 inches in the pole vault at Los Angeles last May.

Phil Furr Is Beaten By Pacho in 8 Rounds

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—Bobby Pacho, rugged California welterweight, punched out an 8-round decision over Phil Furr, of Washington, D. C., in the feature bout at the Royal Windsor Palace tonight. Pacho weighed 148¼, Furr, 149.

District Golf Led By Byrne Curtis

Byrne Curtis, southpaw linksman from the Assessor's Office, paced the District Building tournament yesterday at Indian Spring, the former star linksman from the Four Corners Club turning in a 74 round, three over par.

J. Bradford McCoy, morgue master, was next with an 84, while other scores, to be grouped in four handicap flights when the event ends tomorrow, included W. W. Curtis, 94, and T. J. White, 94, Highway Office; R. L. Tarbett, Sewer, 91; E. L. Taylor, Highway, 101.

Twenty-two entries played yesterday and at least 40 more employes are expected to compete today.

Gus Hook, Ivan Gantz, Tie at Belle Haven

Gus Hook, Mount Pleasant, and Ivan Gantz, Suburban, tied for low net honors in the final golf meeting of the year for the Middle Atlantic Greenskeepers yesterday at Belle Haven. Tommy Ryan, pro at the Alexandria course, was host.

Gantz played the tricky layout in 78 and deducted a 5 handicap, while Gantz was 83 with 10 strokes off.

Gontarski Is Captain.

Stanley Gontarski will captain the Long Island University rugby club next season, Prof. Arthur Yates, coach of the team, announced yesterday.

G.W. Coaches Are Pleased With Backs

Putting the Tulsa game behind them with an air of resignation, George Washington's gridmen dug in yesterday for another siege of training in preparation for Friday night's engagement with Mississippi.

Ole Miss will be the Colonials' third major opponent in as many weeks, and for the third time the downtown school will be the underdog. The Bayou boys dropped a 14-7 verdict to Tulane last week, and were beaten by L. S. U., but a scoreless tie with Temple and victories over Louisiana Tech, St. Louis and Quachita indicate the team's potential power.

Bruiser Kinnard, who seems headed for professional football and a second year on the All-American eleven, and Ray Hapes, a backfield star of the usual versatility, are the outstanding players on this year's squad. Both have been outstanding this season and played here against the Buff and Blue last season. Hapes, incidentally, is on record with the longest run for touchdown of the season, a 103-yard gallop against Quachita.

But the Colonial coaching staff feels confident that the host eleven will fire a few guns on its own account this week. Maestro Jim Pixlee was especially satisfied with the work of his new backfield combination, Merka, Turner, Sampson and Nowaskey, and has given the quartet regular jobs. But he didn't overlook the work of Pete Yurwitz and Lloyd Berry, at end, which was nothing short of spectacular. Rebholz, at tackle, also came in for a measure of praise for his work.

But it will take more than a few pats on the back to beat Mississippi, and with that in mind the boys will at home every afternoon this week, getting ready for the company.

Citadel Vs. State.

College Station, Raleigh, Nov. 1.—In the feature Southern Conference game of the week, State College's Wolfpack meets Citadel's Bulldogs Saturday in Riddick Stadium.

Sports Postscripts

There now has arisen the problem of selecting the valuable member of the Redskins and the choice, as this column sees it, must be made from four of the players . . . SAMMY BAUGH, of course, on his passing ability, CLIFF BATTLES, on his ball carrying talents, RILEY SMITH, for his field generalship as quarterback and accurate placekicking as well, and Captain TURK EDWARDS, tackle for his outstanding play in the line, seem to have the edge on the others . . . before rendering a decision, however, it would probably be wiser to await the conclusion of a few more games . . . speaking of BAUGH'S passing, there was another sample of the Southwest brand offered at Griffith Stadium, Friday night, by "TOSSIN' TOMMY" THOMPSON, Tulsa's sharpshooter . . . although only a sophomore, he is already being acclaimed SAMMY'S superior by Southwest observers . . . and nothing he did against George Washington's Colonials under the arc lights could refute their contention . . . although his pass is not exactly the same variety of bullet-heave in which BAUGH specializes, they were just as accurate and the tip-off on his skill might be exemplified by the fact that during the last quarter, he was directing his receiver with his free hand and then socking it to 'em . . .

CARTER BARRON, Eastern divisional manager of Loew's Theaters, who still thinks in football terms after all these years, wants to bring the Monroe, Ga., Academy eleven, here, in December to play either the local high school championship team, or an all-Star club for the Hot Lunch Fund . . . as the Monroe team appears to be on its way to the State prep title, it sounds like a good idea . . . how 'bout it, high school athletic committee? . . . incidentally, CARTER'S big brother, RED, who, like CARTER was a great Georgia Tech back, is the Monroe coach . . . "ONE EYE" CONNELLY, who has crashed every gate but ST. PETER'S Pearly one passed through town, the other day, on his way to Sunny Skies . . . and appeared very chagrined because the Redskins weren't playing at Griffith Stadium, for which General Manager JACK ESPEY can thank his stars (No, Bub, not BATTLES BAUGH, et al) . . . Speaking for our promotion department, "Thanks for the plug that your band gave this paper, between halves of the Tulsa game by playing "The Washington Post March" . . .

The cheer-leaders' pleas for better co-operation on the display card business resulted in very excellent letters being produced Friday night by the G. W. cheering section, which spelled, "Hello, Tulsa" . . . but all this may be lost this week, for the stands aren't long enough to greet "Mississippi" in the same way . . .

Mails Carry Sliced Melon For Yankees

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 1.—Twenty-six members of the world champion New York Yankees Baseball Club, including Manager Joe McCarthy, the coaches and Trainer Erle (Doc) Painter, have been mailed checks for $6,471.11 each as a result of their World Series victory over the Giants, the office of Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis announced today.

In addition to the 26 full shares, a dozen lesser awards were made to make up the total players' share of the receipts, $193,044.33.

The total players' pool, including 60 per cent of the receipts of the first four games, after 15 per cent had been deducted for the commissioner's share, and a proportionate amount of the $100,000 radio broadcasting receipts was $459,629.35.

The Detroit Tigers and Chicago Cubs, second in the two leagues, divided $34,472.20 each among their players. The third place Chicago White Sox and Pittsburgh Pirates split $22,981.47 each, and the fourth place Cleveland Indians and St. Louis Cardinals divided $11,490.74 apiece.

That meant $1,188.70 to each Tiger who was voted a full share. The Cubs, who also took the losers' end in the city series, drew down $1,276.75 apiece from the World Series and $393.49 from the city series, to total $1,670.24 each. The Sox shares totaled $1,302.25, as each full share amounted to $752.71 from the World Series and $549.54 from the city series.

Mamakos Gets Nod Over Vic Solters

By Jack Paulus.
Sports Editor of The Post.

Al Reid, of New York, caught the will-o-the-wisp last night. The will-o-the-wisp was Ray Ingram and he caught him with everything but Uncle Joe Turner's green ring posts to win a unanimous decision in the 8-round feature at Turner's Arena.

Ingram bobbed and weaved and danced his way in and out of Al's reach. He should have taken a taxi and hopped cross-town. Such was the power of Reid's blows last night.

A solid blow to the chin in the opening minutes of the fight sent Ingram sprawling awkwardly to the canvas in the only knockdown of the evening. He recovered quickly, but wound up losing a round that was easily his because of an early low blow.

Reid proved a spitfire puncher with plenty of the power that kills in both mitts. The fact that he missed more punches than he landed last night should be written in the books not so much his own failing, for Ingram was easily the better boxer and managed to keep dancing out of Reid's reach.

The Washington Post score gave Reid five rounds, judged two even and awarded one to Ingram.

It was a good, fast fight—but Mr. Ingram was not quite up to the occasion.

Elongated Murray Kanner, Matt Twomey's second offering of the night, made the evening a grand success for his boss when he won a majority decision over Jimmy Swimmer, of Baltimore, in the six-round semifinal.

Post Notes on HUNTING

By Bill Ackerman.

Many persons write to the United States Biological Survey asking how duck stamps of the earlier issues may be obtained, and are informed that the postoffices can sell stamps only for the current year as the law requires that on June 30 all stocks remaining on hand must be destroyed. Prospective purchasers, therefore, can obtain these earlier issues only from stamp dealers or collectors, or from sportsmen or others who are willing to part with them. This year's stamp went on sale July 1, and may be obtained at any postoffice until June 30, 1938.

ACKERMAN.

During the year ended on last June 30, sportsmen, conservationists and others bought 603,623 Federal migratory bird hunting stamps, at $1 each. This sale, the third in the series, exceeded that of the previous year by 150,000, and almost equaled the record sale of 635,001 set by the first stamp. Total sales for the three years amount to 1,686,828.

Minnesota, Illinois, Wisconsin and California led all States last year in the sale of these stamps. In Minnesota, sportsmen bought 72,460; in Illinois, 53,251; while Wisconsin sold 48,999 and California 44,570. Every person more than 16 years of age who hunts migratory waterfowl is required to carry one of these stamps countersigned with his or her name. Proceeds amounting to not less than 90 per cent of the sales, as providd by law, are turned over to the Biological Survey for establishing, maintaining and administering migratory bird refuges, and for that reason alone, even though they might never be used for hunting, every lover of the outdoors should buy one, for in that way —the establishment of strategic refuges along the flyways—and that way alone, will we ever see again a semblance of the former great flights of wild fiowl.

Just a few hours drive and local gunners can be on the salt marshes of outh Jersey, with a chance for what would be to them preseason duck hunting; and for no more than digging down in the jeans for ten bucks and a half, the amount of a nonresident license.

Starting 26 days earlier than last year, the open season in Jersey for hunting wild ducks and geese got under way yesterday at 7 a. m.

Wildfowl hunting along the coastal bays, rivers and lakes this year promises to furnish plenty of thrills for the hunters, as great flights of ducks and geese have been reported along the Northern part of the Atlantic flyway. For the past several weeks many birds have been sighted trading up and down the coastal bays and over tributary streams of Jersey.

This State is one that hasn't felt the dearth of wildfowl to an extent anywhere near as great as most of the others of our Eastern States. Hunters have felt that the restrictions were unduly strict and during the summer the Fish and Game Commission asked the Biological Survey for a readjustment of the open season so that the hunters might have an extended season of several days a week throughout the fall. It was refused, of course, as was all other changes asked for by other States.

New Jersey is included in the second zone by the survey this year after its readjustment, which should make for better hunting. The season last year was from Thanksgiving Day until Christmas, and was generally conceded to be too late.

The season will not conclude until November 30.

Keep in mind there is no open season on wood duck, ruddy duck, bufflehead, canvasback and redhead duck. The females of this last mentioned were shot right along last year on the Susquehanna Flats, because the hunters actually did not know what they were. It does not, for a fact, look anything like the easily known male redhead.

"Ding" Darling in the current Cosmopolitan says: "When asked what interests me most in this cockeyed world, I must qualify the mere statement that it is hunting and fishing. It is more than that. It is a program of restoration which will again make real hunting and fishing perpetual."

To make this an accomplished fact, he lays down these precepts: "Don't shoot more than you raise. Ducks do not make their nests on fence posts. Fish, with the exception of that exotic immigrant known as German carp, do not do their best in an environment predominated by sewage and cludge from industrial plants. Most engineers who design our water-use programs have remained in ignorance of these facts. There is plenty of opportunity to provide natural breeding of both fish and game without disrupting the profitable pursuit of industry and agriculture. There aren't enough incubators in the world to supply the demand by artificial raising; besides Nature does a better job of it if given the chance."

War Admiral Gets 128 Lbs. for Special

Pimlico, Nov. 1.—War Admiral was assigned 128 pounds for the $7,500 added Pimlico Special to be run here on Wednesday. While the weight was not considered heavy for the 3-year-old champion, the others in the field were scaled light. The eligibles and their weights follow:

Bursley Star, 113; Busy K., 103; Bottle Cap, 105; Dark Beau, 98; Eagle Pass, 113; Heel Fly, 116; Misty, 110; Masked General, 99; Rex Flag, 115; Regal Lily, 111; Rainland, 100; Sunphantom, 98; Unfailing, 107; War Admiral, 128; War Minstrel, 109.

In the $10,000 added Riggs Handicap scheduled Friday, Seabiscuit was given top weight of 126 pounds to 125 for War Admiral. Among the other assignments were: Amaroid, 108; Firethorn, 120; Infantry, 110; Thorson, 113, and Roundabout, 103.

Deliberator Runs Second At Hilltop

Opening of Maryland Track Draws Crowd of 10,000.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico, Nov. 1.—Last and apparently a beaten filly with a third of the race run, A. J. Joyner's High Fleet developed sufficient momentum to take a neck decision in the fifth running of the Baltimore Autumn Handicap, a 6 furlong sprint that featured the opening of the ten-day meeting today. The E erglades Stable's Deliberator was second three parts of a length in advance of the Tranquillity Farm's Capt. Cal. Among the "also rans" was J. Yancey Christmas' Rough Time and hope of the Washingtonians in the crowd.

High Fleet was only lukewarm in the betting and rewarded those who invested in No. 5 tickets with a $14.50 mutuel.

Aided by perfect racing weather, Pimlico's "Stake-a-Day" meeting got under way auspiciously with a crowd of 10,000 in the stands and wagering moving along briskly. Competition was keen from the start of the program.

The Autumn Handicap fairly sizzled with early speed. Rough Time, Speed to Spare and Deliberator streaked along the backstretch at break-neck gait. Of the trio, only Deliberator exhibited staying qualities. Going into the far turn, High Fleet trailed the field of nine but Jockey Wayne Wright soon had her headed for the first flight.

Deliberator Fails.

In the stretch, Rough Time and Speed to Spare fell back and along came High Fleet to challenge Deliberator. The latter, showing the effects of hard early usage, lacked the punch of his rival and High Fleet won going away.

The winner's time of 1:11 4-5 was creditable over, the fast track.

Tommy Hitchcock, the polo star, sent Eldorador away from his elaborate stable of jumpers to take the day's steeplechase which opened the program. The big Display gelding took the lead early and withstood all efforts of the favorite, Little Marty, to dislodge him, finishing two lengths ahead. Despite a cut front leg, Bartholdi finished third in the field of five. Eldorador paid $7.50.

The first flat race of the meeting went to Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Red Pepper. The track official's colt came from behind to nip Equerry, owned by G. A. Garrett, in a photo finish. Jubal Junior, owned by Admiral Cary T. Grayson, was third after setting most of the pace and carrying the chief play. Red Pepper paid $10.40, and Equerry was $21.80 to place.

Titian Kiddie, the favorite and running in the colors of J. S. Archer, accounted for the third race, a six-furlong sprint, by a half length margin over Mrs. H. Good's Balcony. Bally Bay was a close third in the field of a dozen. Jockey Moose Peters gave the $5.00 shot a good ride. The time was an ordinary 1:13 3-5.

Bradley Horse Wins.

In the second photo finish of the day and one that forced the judges to deliberate for some five minutes, the Woolford Farm's Joe Schenck was awarded the decision over A. C. Compton's Sun Egret. Pit Bull, of the Vanderbilt entry, was third in the group of 11. The winner was an $8.40 betting proposition.

Col. E. R. Bradley won his first full purse of the fall season in this State in the fifth race, the Monocacy Purse. Before Bow and Arrow won by a length today, Bradley's only success was a dead heat in which Biologist figured. Bow and Arrow came through on the rail to collar Conquer, the pacemaker. Roustabout, a Whitneyite, was third. Bow and Arrow paid $16.50.

Kinross provided a surprise by winning the sixth race to the tune of a $65.90 mutuel. The Vespasian colt was moving up the class ladder but downed Gilding Trades by a neck and Sickle Bill by virtually a length.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RED PEPPER, $10.40, $6.70, $3.60; EQUERRY, $21.80, $8.30; JUBAL JUNIOR (entry), $2.80.

DAILY DOUBLE (EL DORADOR AND RED PEPPER) PAID $78.30.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For all ages (foaled in Maryland). Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:32½. Off at 2:37½. Winner, R. S. Archer's ch. m. (5), by Light Brigade—Beautous. Trained by R. B. Archer. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:13 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JOE SCHENCK, $8.40, $5.20, $3.30; SUN EGRET, $17.60, $6.50; PIT BULL (entry), $2.70.

JOE SCHENCK, off in Pulk, worked his way to contention on outside and closed with strong drive to be up in concluding stride. SUN EGRET was hard ridden to assume command on inside nearing turn and closed with good speed, but could not resist the winner. PIT BULL went forwardly but weakened in closing test.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,500. The Monocacy. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:36. Off at 3:37. Winner, R. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIGH FLEET, $14.50, $7.70, $5.20; DELIBERATOR, $5.30, $4.20; CAPT. CAL, $9.60.

HIGH FLEET, favored by the fast pace and a trailer to the turn, improved position steadily thereafter and closed with rush to be up in final strides. DELIBERATOR, in thick of contention from start, closed gamely. CAPT. CAL saved much ground entering stretch and closed with good energy.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:46. Off at 4:52. Winner, Mrs. C. Two-dollar mutuels paid—KINROSS, $65.90, $22.80, $15.10; BUILDING TRADES, $7.30, $5.00; SICKLEBILL, $5.80.

KINROSS, forwardly placed from start, came between horses under good handling and disposed of BUILDING TRADES in final sixteenth. BUILDING TRADES raced LIGHT CHATTER and CHIMNEY TOP into defeat and continued willingly to finish. SICKLEBILL badly outrun for half, circled field and was going fastest at end.

EIGHTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:15. Off at 5:17½. Winner, A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BATTLING GIRL, $12.70, $8.40, $3.40; XANDRA, $4.90, $3.20; MR. BUN, $2.70.

BATTLING GIRL, allowed to settle into best stride, worked way to contention along backstretch, rallied to drive to take command and barely lasted ahead of XANDRA'S closing rush. The latter, trailer for a half, closed with belated rush. MR. BUN, off prominently, was taken up and sent to outside, moved up sharply to press PLAYOFF'S pace, and weakened nearing end.

Mike Eslin In Special Gloves Bout

Though losing on close decision to Andrew Speleas last week, Eslin's willingness to mix it and comical capers captured the fans' fancy to such an extent that he is being brought back Wednesday by public demand.

With a record breaking field of entries the prospect, all senior entries for the Golden Glove competition must be received by 6 o'clock today. Weighing in, physical examinations and pairings are scheduled for the Knights of Columbus Hall tomorrow night between 6 and 8 o'clock.

One of the high spots of the tournament will be the possible crowning of a new team champion. Golden Glove champion since the tournament's inception four years ago, National Guardsmen will be closely pressed by Quantico Marines and Terminal Y. M. C. A., tourney favorites.

Navy Hopes To End Jinx With Lions

Special Dispatch to The Post.

The game with Columbia will be the last played by Navy on its own grounds, and is the outstanding home game of the season here.

The practice period was brief this afternoon, and much of it was given to an inspection of the pictures of the Pennsylvania game. Hardwick and the other coaches pointing out the good and bad points of the Navy team's play.

Later there was a scrimmage against Squad B, only those who did not play Saturday, or played for short periods, taking part.

No change in Navy's first line-up is anticipated, except that it is hoped that Capt. Ray DuBois, right guard, will be in shape to take his position from the start.

The junior and sophomore members of the backfield, including Lem Cooke, Arthur Franks and Emmett Wood, have definitely won regular places in the varsity backfield, displacing three members of the graduating class.

Bob Antrim, outstanding blocking and defensive back, is the only senior who remains in the first backfield, which started the season as an all-senior aggregation. Franks is a back of the same type, whose 200 pounds make him one of the biggest men who ever played in a Navy backfield.

Cooke and Wood, junior and sophomore, respectively, have improved as running backs with every game, though both did some costly fumbling Saturday. Harring something unforeseen, they will, with Antrim and Franks, make up the starting backfield against Columbia.

Emory and Henry Football Schedule May Be Canceled

Emory, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—Dr. J. N. Hillman, president, said tonight that Emory and Henry College's football game with Howard College, scheduled for November 13, here, might be canceled and that the Virginia college might discontinue intercollegiate football altogether.

Asserting that "our gate receipts on the past three home games have been so small that we have lost money on every guarantee," Dr. Hillman said the Howard game, if played, would have to be transferred to Birmingham.

Emory and Henry has won only three games and tied one in the past two years, after winning 67, 23 of them consecutively, and taking four in the nine year administration of Coach W. S. "Pedie" Jackson, who went to King College in Bristol in 1936.

Dr. Hillman said a meeting would be held here November 13 to determine to college's future course as to intercollegiate football.

Ben Frey Found Dead; Former Reds' Hurler

Jackson, Mich., Nov. 1 (AP).—Benny Frey, pitcher for the Cincinnati Reds of the National League from whom he had sought voluntary retirement after being ordered into the minor leagues, was found dead today.

The body of the 31-year-old veteran of six years service in the big leagues was discovered in a closed car in a garage at the farm home of his sister, Mrs. Richmond Cunliffe, near here.

Arena Fights

was easily the master, out-boxing and out-punching his foe at every moment. Nither did a lot of damage, however, with the only casualty being a gore-spattred face for Swimmer. Kanner weighed 194¼; Swimmer came in at 194¾.

Steve Mamakos, 150¾, former District amateur, slapped his war to a unanimous decision over Vic Solters, 157½, of Baltimore in the second bout of the night.

Steve, making his second professional fight, was less impressive than in his first bout last week when he won by knockout in the first round. Steve landed few real punches throughout the four rounds and disported himself mostly in the manner of an adagio dancer.

Solters had a fair left which he kept poking into Mamakos' puzzled face one second out of every three. Steve, and his handler, Matt Twomey, seemed unable to figure out a defense for that left.

Mamakos' main fault was failing to land his punches solidly. His ineffective swings earned him the ringside soubriquet of "Slappin' Steve." A not too-exaggerated title, at that.

Pete Galiano, a stumpy, bull-faced Baltimore pug, earned a majority decision in what the crowd thought was the best fight of the evening. He was given the nod over Jack Giacalone, a blonde Italian from New York.

Maynard Daniels, 191¼, Washington, and Joe Sofia, 189½, of Philadelphia, fought four action-packed rounds to a draw in the opener. Daniels zigzagged to his corner, practically out on his feet when the fight ended.

Daniels, fighting his second professional fight, forced the fight until the last round. Sofia took charge of things then and punched his way to a much-booed draw verdict.

Vic Finazzo, 150¼, Baltimore, won a majority decision over Stanford Carrier, 148¾, Washington, in the last fight of the night.

Gophers Bow From Select Grid Circle

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Nov. 1.—For the third successive week and without anything approaching serious debate, California's all-conquering Golden Bears occupy the National pigskin peak.

While Minnesota dropped out of the "first ten" for the first time in four years, and a quartet of championship contenders elbowed their way to higher brackets, California piled up another landslide margin in the Associated Press nation-wide poll of newspaper experts.

The Bears were the No. 1 choice of 49 out of 62 writers, and topped the list with 600 points out of a possible 620. At the same time Alabama, Baylor, Fordham and Nebraska rode to higher ratings for the week on the crest of a fresh wave of votes.

Here's How They Rank.

Here's the latest tabulation, scoring each team on a 10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 basis and with first-place votes indicated in parentheses:

First ten.	Points.
1. California (49)	600
2. Alabama (6)	503
3. Pittsburgh (4)	482
4. Baylor (2)	331
5. Fordham	281
6. Nebraska	191
7. Yale	181
8. Ohio State	178
9. Dartmouth	146
10. Santa Clara	113

(Note: One ballot bracketed California, Alabama and Pitt in triple tie for lead.)

Second ten: 11, Duke, 107; 12, Notre Dame, 75; 13, Villanova, 62; 14, Minnesota, 55; 15, Tennessee, 24; 16, tie between Duquesne and Arkansas, 10 each; 18, Louisiana State, 8; 19, tie between Tulane and Northwestern, 6. (Also ran: Colorado, 5; Southern California, 5; Texas Christian, 2; Holy Cross and Vanderbilt, 1 each.)

Runner-Up Battle.

The seesaw race for runner-up honors between Alabama and Pittsburgh, with the Crimson Tide regaining the edge, has attracted close attention. Each has an eye on the Rose Bowl. Pitt looks to have the tougher November path, with Notre Dame, Nebraska and Duke among four remaining opponents. Alabama must hurdle Tulane, Georgia Tech and Vanderbilt to keep its slate clean.

Notre Dame, which vaulted from nowwhere to twelfth place in this week's ranking, following stirring triumphs over the Navy and Minnesota, will entertain the Panthers Saturday in the country's headline match. There is no less interest in this clash because it winds up the Pitt-Notre Dame series, at least for the time being.

Unbeaten Baylor, still the Southwest sensation, advanced two notches in the latest ranking list. Fordham's decisive victory over North Carolina propelled the undefeated Rams from tenth to fifth place. Nebraska was elevated from eleventh to sixth, a new high for the Huskies, following triumph over Indiana.

Gophers, Vandy Drop.

Vanderbilt, last week's prize recruit, and Minnesota dropped out of the first ten to make room for Nebraska and Santa Clara in the general shakeup. The Commodores, seventh a week ago, tumbled almost out of sight after their beating by Georgia Tech. They got one consolation point, which was more than they could collect against the Engineers Saturday.

Minnesota fell from fourth to fourteenth, although one diehard nominated the skidding Gophers for second place. Santa Clara, unbeatn rival of California for West Coast distinction, climbed into the top ten for the first time. Last year the Broncos were rated sixth at the close of the season and won the Sugar Bowl bid as well as the game.

Lytton and Dickson Out Of Green Terror Game

Portland Vs. Linfield.

Portland, Oreg., Nov. 1.—Fresh from their impressive intersectional triumph over Brigham Young University of the Rocky Mountain Conference, University of Portland gridmen will invade McMinville, Oreg., Saturday to tangle with Linfield College Wildcats, a traditional rival.

New Collegiate Athletic Head

Asa S. Bushnell, former graduate manager of Athletics at Princeton, will head new group. At least eleven college sports groups are expected to affiliate. The office will open in New York January 1.

Henry Picard Wins Argentina Open Title; Ties Record at 288

Climaxes U. S. Invasion; Nelson in Deadlock for Second Place.

By the Associated Press.

Buenos Aires, Argentina, Nov. 1. Henry Picard climaxed a golf invasion of Argentina by United States pros today by winning the Argentine Open championship with a record-tying 72-hole score of 288.

Tomas Genta, veteran Argentine pro, and Eugenio Dunezat tied for runner-up honors with 290. Genta burned up the course with a 7-under-par 66 in the last round, but Picard, who coasted in with a 74, had too long a lead.

Byron Nelson, another member of the American group, finished in a tie for fifth place with 294, with Denny Shute well back at 298. Picard's total equaled the record score posted by Genta in 1930 over the same course, San Andres.

Except for dropping one of three four-ball exhibition matches, the three United States pros won everything they entered in Argentina.

HENRY PICARD.

Four Golfers Deadlock for Turkey Medal

Qualifying in the East Potomac turkey tournament was concluded yesterday, with K. M. Skaggs' 69 pacing the scores. The low four will play off the medalist honors, Skaggs, W. H. Miller, 70; W. W. Seay, 72, and Jim Gipe, member of the Harding Cup team, 72.

First-round matches must be played from November 4 to 7, inclusive. Pairings and scores of the three flights of play:

Schumacher, Goodman Meet for Mexican Title

Mexico City, Nov. 1 (AP).—Don Schumacher, of Dallas, Tex., today entered the finals of the Mexican Amateur Golf championship with a 10-and-9 victory over Blain McNutt, of El Paso, Tex.

Johnny Goodman, of Omaha, Nebr., the United States Amateur titlist, won the right to meet Schumacher in the championship round by trimming Ed Appold, Mexico City businessman, 9 and 8.

Cards Point For Bobcats On Saturday

A luckless West Virginia Wesleyan eleven will supply the opposition for Catholic University's eleven Saturday at Brookland, and while the Bobcats' record is anything but impressive, the Cardinals don't expect a pushover.

Defeated by Waynesburg last Saturday, 7-0 and with nary a victory to its credit, the little Methodist school still is regarded as a potent grid package. George Washington, which experienced difficulties winning an 18-13 victory over it earlier in the season, will attest to that fact. Wesleyan gave the Colonials 60 minutes of stiff competition before finally bowing out.

Catholic rested last week and will be ready with a full complement of men for Saturday's battle, but Coach "Dutch" Bergman figures he'll need them. Wesleyan was without the services of six important men against Waynesburg, and that seems to be the answer to the Waynesburg defeat. Included in the lot was Albie Coleman, the team's most potent scoring threat.

The Cardinals have an old score to settle with their guests, inasmuch as the Bobcats handed them a surprising 24-19 lacing in a wild game here last year. But there will be no repetition of that this week, not if Bergman can help it. He has the boys on an overtime schedule prepping for the game. Practice makes perfect he fondly hopes.

Bee Is Promoted.

Clair F. Bee, coach of the Long Island University basketball team and director of athletics, has been promoted to the position of associate professor of accounting, it was announced yesterday by Dean Tristram Walker Metcalfe.

Coach Pond Hails Clint Frank As Greatest Back Seen at Yale

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 1—Ducky Pond, of Yale, spoke right out in meetin' today and proclaimed Clint Frank, the Blue's heavy duty halfback, the best back he has ever seen at New Haven.

This praise of Frank, made at the weekly Football Writers Association luncheon, gave Fritz Crisler, Princeton coach, something to think about. Crisler, still a little shaken by Harvard's rout of his Tigers, listened to Pond's laudation of Frank, who will take a shot at the Princeton defences on November 13.

His coach's rating places Frank above such Yale immorials as Albie Booth, Bill Mallory and Mal Stevens, all of whom have played for the Blue in the 15 years Pond has been associated with Yale.

While extolling his captain, Pond also pointed out that Al Hessberg, who scored the vital touchdown in the tie with Dartmouth, Saturday, was Yale's chief trouble shooter.

"Hessberg is one of Yale's most valuable backs," said Pond. "He can replace any of three first-string backs, Frank, Al Wilson or Dave Colwell. He doesn't start many games, but he plays a great deal."

Crisler, who opened his talk with the observation that football is getting crazier every Saturday, spoke warmly of Harvard's fine eleven, which meets Yale in the final Big Three game, November 20.

"Harvard has everything. The boys hit hard and run hard. My players say they tackle hard, too. If they don't get a distorted sense of values from the Princeton game they will be a tough bunch to beat."

"Just to show the boys something new we used a three-man line early in the game," Crisler continued. "I guess it did as well as any until the second play when Struck (Vernon Struck, the Crimson's fullback) started going. Between the halves somebody told me we ought to tackle Struck more. We were tackling him all the time but unfortunately the safety man made most of the tackles."

Hoyas, Badly Bruised, Get Day of Rest

Squad Engages in Only Light Drill for W. Va. Game.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Georgetown University's black-eyed boys in blue, still weary and weak from the week-end's bruising fracas with Manhattan, returned to work yesterday, forlornly contemplating Saturday's game with West Virginia, which figures to be another battle royal.

West Virginia will come here with no mercy in its heart, for Georgetown gave it a 26-0 drubbing in its home-coming game last year at Morgantown. It was the Hoyas that played perfect football that day, and they'll have to come close to that form to be in the battle this week.

Georgetown did little in the way of practice yesterday, confining itself to touch football, kicking and signal practice. It probably will not do much more all week.

Packers Leading Pro Grid League In Yards Gained

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—The champion Green Bay Packers continue to lead the National Football League in ground gaining and scoring, statistics released today show.

The Packers nave gained 2,119 yards and scored 153 points. Pittsburgh is second in ground gaining with 2,013 yards, while Detroit is second in points scored, with 120.

The New York Giants and Chicago Bears, Eastern and Western leaders, are the best defensive clubs so far. The Giants have held opponents to 892 yards and 30 points while only 1,091 yards and 34 points have been registered against thee Bears.

down the Rough Biders, but an upset is not improbable. Roosevelt has played a steady brand of football, not spectacular, but alert and spirited. Its line will probably match Tech's, but it is doubtful if Roosevelt can produce the necessary offense to compete with a powerful McKinley attack that has not been completely stifled this year.

Tech's Henry Rassier, Jack Belote and Freddy Bach comprise the best trio of backs in the series. Belote, the quarterback, has proved beyond question that he is one of the two outstanding backfield performers in the series, the other being Western's Morris Snead, also a signal caller. Belote is a real triple-threater, an excellent passer and kicker, shifty runner and a great defensive player.

Rassier Is Dangerous.

Rassier is, in the opinion of many observors, even more dangerous a ball-carrier than Belote. His speciality is line plunging but unlike that type of runner often breaks away for lengthy touchdown jaunts. Bach, the running half, is a fleet and elusive runner who is apt at anytime to run wild in the open field.

Roosevelt will depend on Fred Metzler and Hal Marks, a pair of accurate passers, for the bulk of its offense unless Joe Fraber, injured fullback, is able to play. Fraber will be on the bench and it is likely that he will be inserted for at least part of the fray.

The Rough Rider line featuring Joe Kolker, a fine tackle, and Eddie Vasvary, clever defensive guard, shapes up as very formidable, but lack of reserves may enable Tech to beat down its resistance, especially in the second half.

Kick-off is scheduled for 3:30 o'clock.

General Motors Votes $1.50 on Common Stock

Disbursement Is 50 Cents Above Previous Declaration.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 1.—Directors of General Motors Corporation today declared a dividend of $1.50 on the common stock, or 50 cents more than the previous disbursement. A dividend of $1 was paid September 13 and on June 12 a similar disbursement was made. On March 25, a payment of 25 cents was made. The latest dividend is payable December 13 to stockholders of record November 12.

The regular quarterly dividend of $1.25 a share was declared on the $5 preferred stock, payable February 1, 1938, to stockholders of record January 10. 1938. Today's payment on the common stocks brings total paid out so far this year to $3.75 a share. In 1936 payments totaled $4.50.

International Nickel Extra.

Directors of International Nickel Co. of Canada, Ltd., declared an extra dividend of 25 cents and a dividend of 50 cents on the common stock, both payable December 31 to stock of record December 1. A dividend of 50 cents a share was declared in the previous quarter. Total payments for the year amount to $2.25 a share.

Coca-Cola $2 Extra.

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—Coca Cola Co., today declared an extra dividend of $2 and a quarterly dividend of 75 cents on the common stock. A similar extra was paid last December 15, The previous quarterly dividend was 75 cents. Both dividends are payable December 15 to stock of record November 26. Profits for the quarter ended September 30 after dividends on class "A" stock were $8,041,700 against $6,776,748 in the September quarter last year.

The company announced payment of an extra month's salary to all employes outside the management group had been authorized by directors. Additional compensation of $250,000 was also authorized to be distributed among the managerial personnel. September quarter profits were equal to $2.01 a share on the common stock against $1.70 a share in the 1936 September quarter.

Chicago, Nov. 1 (AP).—Standard Dredging Corporation directors today voted a special dividend of 40 cents a share on the common stock and an initial quarterly dividend of 40 cents on the new $1.60 cumulative convertible preferred, both payable December 1 to stockholders of record November 20.

Steel Operations Decline to 48.6%

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week declined 3.5 points to 48.6 per cent of capacity, compared with 52.1 per cent last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today. A month ago operations averaged 66.1 per cent of capacity while a year ago the rate was 74.7 per cent.

The drop, the seventh consecutive week of decline, carried the industry's production rate to the lowest since the end of 1935.

Stocks Close Lower Despite Lower Margins as Holiday Influence Is Felt.

New York, Nov. 1.—If anyone supposed that today when the lower margin requirement on stock purchases and the higher margin on short selling took effect would bring a rush of released money to buy stocks, he went home for tomorrow's holiday a trifle disappointed. Neither in trading volume nor in price movement did the stock market give any sign of animation. This also was the day set for trial of the Stock Exchange's new method of helping out a slow ticker condition by printing "flash" prices on leading stocks. No need of flashes appeared, although a spark of life here and there would have helped matters. The stock turnover was only about a million shares. Closing prices managed to rise above the early low levels, but were lower on the day all through the list. Bonds were steady. December wheat fell half a cent to 96¼ cents a bushel.

Wall Street came to work after a short stock session on Saturday which had too much relaxation in it to inspire any fresh bullish operations today, with a holiday just ahead. In an uncertain market the tendency is for prices to ease a little before a holiday, just as the day before a vacation usually brings a buying rush when the trend is plainly upward. Trading was notable for its dullness and while prices were soft from the beginning, there was little indication of any general tendency to take a stand on either side.

Further Recession.

News over the week-end was in conclusion. No fresh insight was given into the President's view on whether tax revision would be permitted at the extra session of Congress or how far it might be wise to go in pressing for enactment of further deflationary legislation, such as the hours and wages bill. Meanwhile, some odds and ends of trade news came in to show that the business recession which began last summer is continuing. The best known business activity indices for last week showed declines and the banking reviews for last month, from the Federal Reserve regional bulletins to the commercial bank summaries, concurred in the findings of recession. Those which indulged in prophecy, as for example the National City Bank, veered to the optimistic side and suggested that the recession is only a temporary phase in the longer term recovery movement.

The steel industry this week will sink further. Mill operations will fall to 48.6 per cent of capacity, according to the estimate of the American Iron & Steel Institute, a drop of 6.7 per cent from last week. A year ago the rate was 74.7 per cent of capacity. The markets are watching to see how much of an offset large crops are going to be and what advantage the pressure of a business decline is going to bring in giving more elasticity to wage and hour schedules.

Opening Prices Lower.

Opening stock prices were down a fraction to about 2 points in some of the leaders, and further slides took place before noon, after which a slow recovery was made here and there, but the turnover was too small to give any movement much significance. Steels were the poorest group in the early trading, reacting to a conservative review by a trade journal, and, later, finding confirmation in a much reduced operating rate predicted for this week. U. S. Steel common dropped more than 3 points to around 60. Motors and rails also found more disposition to sell than to buy. Chrysler was pressed down 2 points. Santa Fe fell 4 points.

Other common stocks to fall 2 points or more were Allied Chemical, Air Reduction, Worthington Pump, Westinghouse, Wheeling Steel, Union Pacific, U. S. Rubber, Skelly Oil, Owens Glass, Philip Morris, Phillips Petroleum, Sears-Roebuck, duPont, Goodyear and Howe Sound. Stocks to go up a little were mostly preferreds on inactive issues with thin markets, were summarized by the Association of American Railroads as 15.4 per cent under a year ago, and as only slightly above last year for the first nine months.

Traction stocks had a firmer tone, in one of their periodic phases of conduct and possibly just to give a little pre-election puzzle. I. R. T., Manhattan and B. M. T. advanced moderately on increased turnover. Deere, selling ex-dividend the 200 per cent common stock, three for one split, opened more than a point lower in relation to its final price for the old shares. Case dipped below par.

Losing Gold.

Washington reports that the United States was losing gold were received with unusual interest in international banking and foreign exchange circles. Apparently the loss, suffered through the stabilization fund, was sufficient to offset some of the large shipments of Japanese metal which have come in lately and some of the newly mined and scrap gold which is purchased daily by the Treasury. No doubt some of the gold was lost to France which announced last week an intention to import some from this country, and it is also possible that some has been lost to Brazil and possibly to Belgium. The belga today rose to a new high for the year. Switzerland also is a possible gold taker from this country. During the week ended October 29 known gold imports totaled about $30,000,000, but only about $5,000,000 was added to inactive gold account.

Prices.

According to the Sun's computation, common stock prices dropped an average of 8.6 per cent in October, a smaller decline than that which took place in September, but one nevertheless which meant considerable losses to stockholders. Steel had the biggest tumble, falling more than 21 per cent, and the reason was the most obvious in the daily news. Next to that group the farm implements and the rail equipments dropped the hardest, giving up 17 per cent, both sections having been pushed ahead rapidly early in the year on too much optimism regarding the effect of good crops, for the farm implements, and of larger traffic for the rails, in the other. Other groups which fell more rapidly than stocks as a whole were the motors, musical instruments, paper products, rails, rubbers, sugars, building materials, motor accessories, leathers, chemicals and metals and mining.

Wheat Prices Dip as Export Demand Lags

Proposed Farm Legislation Also Acts as a Bearish Factor.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 1.—Uncertainties over proposed farm legislation did more or less to restrict speculative demand for wheat futures today and make the Chicago wheat market average lower.

Special notice was taken of reports current that processing taxes on wheat and other commodities were being deliberated upon. Large world shipments of wheat, with no evidence that North American wheat exports had broadened to any material degree, acted also as a weight on values here.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were unchanged to ½ cent lower compared with Saturday's finish, December 96¼@96¾, May 95⅞@96, July 90⅝@90¾. Corn unchanged to ¼ off, December, 57⅜@57½, May 59⅛, July 59⅞@60. Oats unchanged to ⅜ down, December 30½. Rye unchanged to ⅛ decline, December 73¾. Provisions results were unchanged to a setback of 5 cents.

Stock Seat Rises To $78,000 Bid

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—The market for New York stock exchange memberships was unofficially quoted today at $78,000 bid, $90,000 asked. This represented considerable improvement over the situation a fortnight ago, when a membership sold at $61,000, the lowest in 18 years, in the midst of a violent fall in prices.

The presence of bids $17,000 above the previous sale was attributed in part to the reduction in margins on stock purchases from 55 per cent to 40 per cent. This, as authorized by the Federal Reserve board, became effective today.

Life Insurance Expert to Talk On Sales Plans

W.H. Worthington Will Be Underwriters' Guest On Thursday.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Thursday at the Willard Hotel the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association membership will hear William H. Worthington, superintendent of agencies of the Home Life Insurance Co. of New York, discuss the subject, "Program Selling" One of the speakers at the National Association of Life Underwriters recent convention at Denver, Mr. Worthington is rated a national authority on program selling of life insurance, having perfected a standardized method of presenting life programs. This is the second monthly luncheon of the fall and winter schedule of the local association, featuring outstanding speakers on life insurance service.

Firm Dissolved.

October 31, concurrently with the dissolution of the firm of Councilor & Buchanan, William Gordon Buchanan, certified public accountant, announced the continuation of his practice of professional accountancy, his profession for 21 years.

He is head professor of the division of business administration at Georgetown University, having been a teacher of finance, commerce and accountancy courses for the past 16 years. During this time he has made many economic and financial surveys in Europe, last year reviewing the banking and monetary system of Soviet Russia.

He has for a number of years specialized in business finance and has become a recognized authority in this field. The problems of small businessmen, as well as the man of large business, have always received his attention and he has made contributions of service to aid business affected by financial and credit ailments during the depression.

Years ago he served as one of the founders of the Washington Association of Credit Men and later served as national director of the National Association of Credit Men for a term of three years. His service in the educational field has been broad, and follows: Lecturer, District Institute of Banking and Institute of Credit; curriculum counselor in courses for various schools; vocational guidance, Washington High Schools; lecturer, United States Army Industrial College, and also on the board of accountancy for District of Columbia, 1932-1936; former chairman of technical committee of the American Society of Certified Public Accountants.

Acacia Records.

During the first nine months of the current year the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. has made record progress along a broad front, William Montgomery, president of the company, has just reported to the board of directors.

"The trend observed earlier in the year has been continued and emphasized by Acacia," Mr. Montgomery said, "and our nine months' record in many respects is the best in the history of the company.

"For example, our income during that period was $11,600,000, the largest, by a very substantial margin, for any similar period. Acacia's assets have risen approximately $5,000,000 so far this year, bringing total assets up to $71,000,000. Insurance in force reached an aggregate of $377,000,000 at the close of the nine months. It is noteworthy that Acacia's increase in insurance in force improved 61 per cent over the same period of 1936."

Automobile Finance.

Automobile finance leaders from the East and South will take an important part in the fourth annual convention of the American Finance Conference, in Chicago, Noverber 10 and 11. Among Washington members of the conference expected at the convention are Lewis W. Cass, Federal Service Finance Corporation; Philip Milestone, Milestone Finance Corporation; T. T. Mott, Mott Motors, Inc., and R. M. Sigwald, Sigwald, Ltd.

Credit and financial vitality affecting the installment purchase of automobiles throughout the Nation will be acted upon by the 600 delegates, who will also consider general business and legislative problems.

The principal convention speaker will be Senator Alben W. Barkley, Kentucky, majority leader of the Senate, on "Monopoly and Government." Such a subject, treated with a view to present tendencies in antitrust legislation and coming only five days before Congress convenes, will be of Nation-wide interest. Henery H. Heimann, executive manager of the National Association of Credit Men, will speak on "The ABC of Banking Prosperity." His group includes 20,000 banking, manufacturing and merchandising

Cotton Below 8-Cent Level

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—Cotton eased further today under hedging, liquidation and foreign selling, influenced by the action of other markets. March sold off from 7.96 to 7.85 and closed at the low with final prices 9 to 17 points net lower.

The market opened 4 to 6 points lower in response to easiness at Bombay and Liverpool. Prices gave way slowly under moderate offerings and near-month liquidation. A larger private crop indication also influenced sentiment. All positions sold down to, or below, the 8-cent level.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia, holding a Equity Court. National Savings & Trust Co., a corporation, as trustee under the will of Myron M. Parker, deceased, plaintiff, vs. Harriet Parker Neale, et al., defendants. Equity No. 65285. Order of publication. The object of this suit is to obtain a judicial construction and interpretation of the will of Myron M. Parker, deceased, and to obtain the instructions of the court for the guidance of the plaintiff as trustee thereunder with respect to the matters and things set forth in the bill of complaint filed in the above entitled cause, and to have jurisdiction of this cause retained and the trust or trusts created by the will of said decedent administered under the supervision and instruction of this court. It appearing to the plaintiff, it is this 25th day of October, 1937, ordered that the defendants, Catherine Pendergast, Myron Burdette, Sidney Neale Birdsall, Edwin S. H. Pendergast, a minor; George Henry Pendergast, a minor; Catherine LeVaun Pendergast, a minor; Clinton MacKenzie Burdette 2d, a minor; Neale Gregg Birdsall, a minor; Stuart Rasner Gregg Birdsall, a minor; Martha Parker and Harriet Parker, a minor, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided, however, that a copy of this order shall be published at least once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and in The Washington Post newspaper. By the court. DANIEL W. O'DONOGHUE, Justice. A true copy. Attest: (Seal.) CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By R. D. QUINTER, JR., Assistant Clerk. 26,2,9.

Bob Burns Says—

My Cousin Hod was quite a playboy down home and he was pretty much of a hand with the women, but they soon got wise to him and none of the girls would have him. Finally one day a strange girl come to town and he made quite an impression on her because she didn't know about his reputation. He seemed so sincere that she accepted his engagement ring and couldn't wait to go down on Main street to flash it.

That night when he called on her, he says, "Well, did'ja show the girls the engagement ring?" and she says, "I sure did!" He says "Did they admire it?" and she says "They done more than that! Four of 'em recognized it!"

Lieut Comdr., U. S. N. R.

YES! GRAB THESE EAR-PHONES QUICK!
ATTENTION, DON WINSLOW... I KNOW YOU ARE ON RELIEF DUTY IN THE RIO GRANDE FLOOD AREA... ATTENTION, DON WINSLOW!
MY WAR UPON AMERICA HAS BEGUN! THIS FLOOD IS MY DOING... WATCH THE OIL TANKS AT THE CITY OF LONGHORN... WHAT HAPPENS THERE WILL BE A SIGN OF MY POWER...
HE'S FADING OUT!
HE MEANS THOSE OIL TANKS, RED!
WHAT FIENDISH TRICK IS HE PLANNING?

DIXIE DUGAN — An Idea. — J. P. McEvoy and H. J. Striebel

LISSEN! I'M MICHAEL FINN'S UNCLE! GET OUTTA ME WAY!!
STAGE 2
KEEP OUT
WELL, MICKEY, WE'RE ALL SET IF HUGO ONLY STAYS UP IN THAT TREE WHERE YOU PUT HIM!
I—I THINK HE WILL. I TOLD HIM IT WAS VERY IMPORTANT.
HE'S OKAY! NOW GET UP IN THAT OTHER TREE AND SWING OVER TO HIM—QUIET EVERYBODY!
WAIT!! HUGO HAS SPOTTED THOSE COCONUTS! I WAS AFRAID OF THAT!
WHACK!

JOE PALOOKA — Screen Test. — By Ham Fisher

BUT MY ORIGINAL IDEA WAS TO HAVE A PARTY FOR JUST THE FOOTBALL PLAYERS!
BUT, WHERE ICE CREAM IS CONCERNED, YOU CAN'T BE PARTIAL, STEVE—
AFTER ALL—WHAT'S A FOOTBALL GAME WITHOUT A CHEERING SECTION?—THEY'RE ALL ENTITLED TO THE TREAT YOU'VE PROMISED
—BUT THE HOUSE WON'T HOLD THE WHOLE SCHOOL??? WHEW—S'GOT ME!—I'M STUCK!
LISTEN—I'VE GOT AN IDEA, STEVE!
QUICK LET'S HAVE IT!

Famous Football Coach.

JUST BECAUSE I WAS WRONG ABOUT GAIL'S FALLING FOR ME, I DON'T NEED TO LET NED KNOW ABOUT IT WELL, OLD MAN, GAIL GAVE ME THE JOB OF TELLING YOU!
TELLING ME WHAT, BUD?
NOW, DON'T SWOON, BRANT—IT'S TOO FAR TO GO FOR WATER OUT WITH IT—TELL ME WHAT—
SHE'S FALLEN FOR ME AND GIVEN YOU THE AIR!
SO YOU FINALLY GOT HER AWAY FROM ME, EH?

JANE ARDEN — An Offer. — By Monte Barrett and Russell Ross
Registered U. S. Patent Office

OH, I'M SORRY—I THOUGHT YOU WERE WANDA DRAKE, AN OLD FRIEND OF MINE!
I SUPPOSE I SHOULD FEEL VERY FLATTERED—SHE'S QUITE A FAMOUS STAR!
THERE'S SOME SWELL BOXIN' MATCHES OVER TO TH' HOLLYWOOD LEGION STADIUM. THEY WANT US T'COME OVER AS SPESHUL GUEST'S.
YOU GO. I'M BUSY ON BIZNESS. BUT THAT'S WHAT A MANAGER'S FER.
I SUPPOSE SO. BETTER HURRY OVER. WE'RE PROJECTING IN TEN MINUTES.
OHHHH—IT'S ME I MEAN OHHHH—
CUT!
OHHHH DEAR—I WONDER WHAT THE VERDICK IS?
KEEP YOUR FINGERS CROSSED BABY.

BENNY — Service With a Smile. — By J. Carver Pusey

ERIC—LOOK AT THIS GIRL—ISN'T SHE THE VERY IMAGE OF WANDA DRAKE? SHE SAYS SHE ISN'T, BUT—PERHAPS SHE DOESN'T LIKE TO REVEAL HER IDENTITY IN PUBLIC—I KNOW HOW IT IS, MY DEAR—NO PRIVACY!
NO—I'M REALLY NOT AN ACTRESS—MY NAME IS JANE ARDEN!
HAVE IT YOUR OWN WAY, WANDA—JANE—WHATEVER YOUR NAME IS—I'D LIKE TO SIGN YOU UP WITH DARNLEY PICTURES—I'M ERIC DARNLEY!
B-B-BUT I—WELL, AFTER ALL, I DO WANT A JOB IN PICTURES!
PLUMBING & HEATING
WE GIVE SERVICE

A STRIKINGLY SMART NEW COLOR THEME in

Nationally Famous

Society Brand

$50

Again America's foremost "Style House" introduces a definitely new color theme . . . Smoky-Blue. A softer, richer, more distinctive blue than you have ever seen. A refreshing change for the man who favors blues . . . and what well-dressed man doesn't. Youthful appearing, yet restrained, Smoky-Blue lends itself admirably to Society Brand's brilliant styling and superb tailoring. Presented in a very fine semi-finished worsted and in patterns of unique designs, all exclusive. Men and young men who want to be a step ahead in style will appreciate this presentation. You'll join us in predicting for them a non-stop flight of enthusiastic acceptance from coast to coast.
